No Relief in Sight

Sweltering heat ran up a toll of six deaths and four prostrations in the Washington area yesterday as the weather man forecast at least three more days of abnormal heat. Even beyond that he could offer little hope for cooler weather.

Thunder storms brought a 16-degree drop between 3 and 4 p. m. and gave residents of the heat-plagued city their first relatively comfortable night in more than a week. The forecast for today, however, was for continued warm with expected maximum temperature of 95, two degrees below yesterday's high.

Two men, including a Washingtonian, drowned at Maryland beaches.

Collapses in Home

Authorities said the following deaths were at least attributable to excessively high temperatures:

Kathleen Byrne, 40, of 2012 North Capitol street, collapsed at home with a temperature of 107 and died at Sibley Hospital.

Mrs. Clarence Embrey, 52, who collapsed in her residence at River road and Route No. 10 in Montgomery County, Md.

John McCoy, 63, colored, 1317 Twenty-second street northwest, pronounced dead at his residence after being found unconscious there by an Emergency Hospital ambulance crew.

Mary Culver, 91, colored, 125 Holmes court northwest, whose fatal illness at that address was "aggravated by the heat," the coroner's office reported.

Peter Garrett, 80, of 1444 V street northwest, pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital.

Katherine Johnson, 53, of 2452 Nichols avenue southeast, who collapsed at her home and died shortly afterward at Casualty Hospital.

It was also revealed yesterday that Catherine Dentz, 89, of Takoma Park, had succumbed to the heat Saturday. She was the oldest voter at the town elections last spring.

Drowned in Creek

Washington's drowning victim yesterday was Donald A. Moseman, 22, a Bureau of Engraving and Printing employe, who sank in Spa Creek, at the mouth of the Severn River, Eastport, Md., while swimming with his wife, Katherine, who attempted to rescue him. The couple, who formerly lived at 1845 Bay street southeast, had made their home since last April aboard the cruiser Barbara Lee in Spa Creek.

With nearly 30 craft participating in the search, Moseman's body was recovered three hours after the tragedy by Melvin Smith and Lawrence Holidayoke.

Seventeen-year-old Howard Belvin, of Norfolk, Va., was drowned near Orchard Beach, Stony Creek, Md., after apparently suffering a heat stroke. The beach is about 4 miles below Annapolis. Belvin was attending the C. M. T. C. camp at Fort George G. Meade.

Prostrated or made ill by the heat were John W. Simmins, 50, an engineer in the Department of Agriculture, who was running a high temperature in Emergency Hospital;

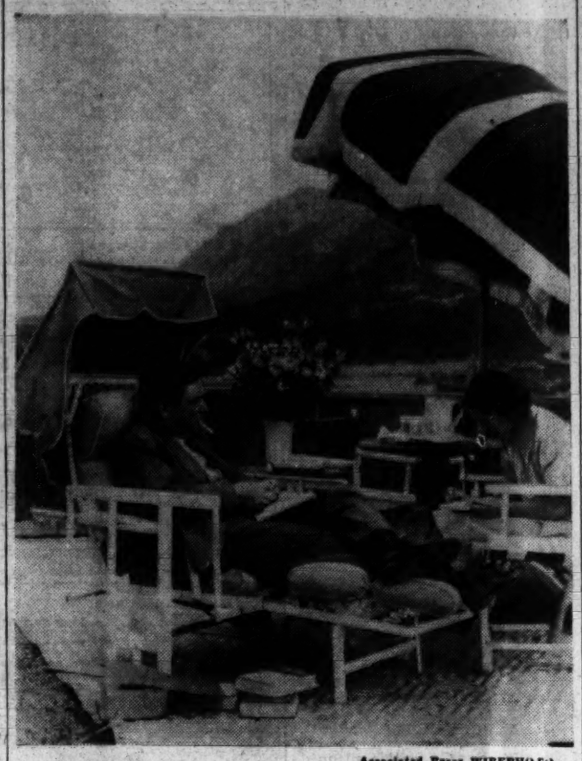
Willkie's Acceptance Speech To Be His Personal Platform



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

CREATIVE COMFORT—Wendell Willkie lolls on the roof of his vacation hotel at the foot of Pike's Peak as he dictates his acceptance speech to his secretary, Grace A. Grahn.

By International News Service

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 28.—Working with two secretaries, Wendell Willkie tonight made rapid progress on the speech he will deliver in Elwood, Ind., on August 17 when he formally accepts the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

Since he has been at Colorado Springs he has counseled largely with farm leaders and cattlemen, and the indications are that the acceptance speech will be his personal platform, representing only his own views on national defense, economics, labor and the balance of the topics to be covered, with the exception of agriculture.

There have been no labor leaders, defense experts or big businessmen in his list of callers, restricted almost entirely to casual visitors and an occasional political leader.

Willkie anticipated visits from Herbert Hoover, Alf M. Landon, William Allen White and George Wharton Pepper before drafting his acceptance speech, but they have not visited Colorado Springs, although Hoover and Landon have communicated with him either by letter or through a third person.

There have not been enough Republican leaders among the candidate's callers even to identify his campaign as Republican and Willkie himself refers to it as a "people's crusade."

Unorthodox as that may be it may have some bearing on the number of Democrats who have

Battle Lines Form

A classic oratorical clash over compulsory military training last night was shaping up in the Senate as a half-dozen national defense measures awaited enactment before an anticipated September 1 adjournment or recess.

To the opposition to conscription in the coming floor battle was added the voice of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. head, who said he soon would make a statement on the issue. Lewis, who conferred with Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, on Saturday, said he shared Wheeler's views against the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, slated to be reported by the Senate Military Affairs Comittee tomorrow. Wheeler intends to fight for a substitute proposal, calling for voluntary Army enlistments for a one-year period, instead of the present three years.

Other Defense Measures

Other measures awaiting enactment in the defense program include:

A $25,000,000 appropriation for a new dam and steam plant for the TVA, to provide power for manufacture by the Aluminum Co. of America of aluminum sheets for plane wings.

The Vinson bill to authorize expenditure of $50,000,000 for construction of naval shore establishments.

Authority requested by President Roosevelt to call out the National Guard, which will be needed to train, in cooperation with the Regular Army, the conscripts who would be called if the Burke-Wadsworth bill is enacted.

The $4,848,000,000 appropriation bill to pay for equipment for an Army of 1,500,000, and for new Navy construction.

An excesss profits tax bill, designed to recapture unreasonable profits on defense contracts, and to substitute for the 8 per cent profit limitation on defense contracts imposed by the Vinson-Tramell Act.

Some Senate Republicans hope to defer the opening of debate on the Burke-Wadsworth bill until August 5, Senator Barkley, majority leader, will offer it Wednesday in the hope that the "extended discussion" will not take

Nazis Demand Swiss Food, British Hear

Germany Also After Gold and Securities, London Is Apprised; Hope of Aid Small

The War Today

LONDON REPORTS of German demands for Swiss food and gasoline reserves coincide with Swiss Gen. Guisan's declaration his army stands ready.

BRITAIN SWAPS air blows with Germany and Italy, as the Nazis introduce a new technique of bomb-carrying fighter planes.

Ultimatum Reported

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, July 28.—The Nazis recently addressed "questions" in the character of an ultimatum to the Swiss government, it was learned today.

The Swiss, hemmed in by Germany, Italy and a France which now takes its orders from Berlin—and with Great Britain's naval blockade of Europe threatening their overseas trade—are said to be on the verge of yielding to the inescapable by returning a reluctant "yes" to Germany's pressure, in order to continue living in precarious peace.

Put bluntly, Germany's demands on Switzerland concern new stocks of food, grain and oil, accumulated since last summer as war reserves. Behind the pressure from Berlin to hand over part, if not all of these reserves, it was understood, was the implicit threat of invasion.

Nazis After Swiss Gold

In addition, the Germans are said to be after Switzerland's gold, a large part of which has been shipped to the United States for safety, and a considerable amount of American stocks and other securities held by Swiss citizens.

It could not be ascertained whether Germany attached a time limit to her request from Switzerland, but no one here is under any illusion that a time limit would be necessary. The Swiss are now cut off entirely from effective military aid by Great Britain. Knowing their plight, the Swiss are believed to have gone to the trouble of informing the British government officially about it.

Swiss reserves of oil, grain and food, were imported for the most part with the permission of the British government, which reached a special war trade agreement with the Swiss last winter, in effect "rationing" Switzerland on vital imports in the hopes of preventing any surplus from finding its way into Germany.

Swiss Will Resist, General Says

Nazi Bombs, Mosquito Boats Rush 'Softening Up' of Britain

Ship Sinkings at the Present Rate Will Amount to 2,000,000 Tons a Month, Germans Say, Predicting Invasion Soon

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, July 28.—The process of "softening up" England by means of dive-bombers, submarines and torpedo-carrying mosquito motor-craft, seems now to have begun in earnest and a big landing attempt may be only a matter of days, if not hours.

German sources report intensified air attacks on British military aerodromes, ports, railroad junctions, convoys, and armaments factories, and that sort of activity in this war always has been a sure forerunner of a big German onslaught.

The official communiques of the last two days speak of a total of 166,000 tons of British merchant tonnage being sunk by submarines, speed-boats, and dive-bombers, in addition to three destroyers.

If this rate can be maintained the British stand to lose tonnage at the rate of over 2,000,000 tons monthly, which the Germans claim is murderous. Indications now, say the Germans, are that this rate not only will be kept up but substantially bettered. Nazi dive-bombers during the last few days have been peppering the entire south of England, all the way from Hastings westward to Cardiff and Swansea, as well as airfields in Cronwall.

Fighters Drop Bombs

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), July 29.—German bombers and bomb-carrying fighter planes—something new—raced back to the attack over southern England and Wales early today after Sunday combats in which the air ministry said nine German and two British aircraft were destroyed.

Wales had its longest siege of the war, a three-hour battle in which bombs, pursuit ships, antiaircraft guns and searchlights all played their parts.

This morning's raids extended also over southwest and northeast England and the thud of heavy explosions was heard repeatedly.

Authorities said little damage was

Havana Delegates Approve Hull Plan To Bar Invaders, Land-Grabbers

By the Associated Press

Havana, July 28.—The "Act of Havana" was unanimously reported by the peace commission tonight for formal adoption by the American Foreign Ministers to create an intercontinental "Monroe Doctrine" with machinery for its rapid application as a barrier against any foreign invader or land-grabbing conqueror.

The document, which many believe may become historically as important as the old Monroe Doctrine itself, proclaimed the marked success of United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull in his efforts to gain the moral if not the material support of the other 20 American republics for any measures the United States might find necessary to take concerning European possessions in this hemisphere in the interests of continental defense.

Pass on Amendment

The combined declaration and resolution called the "Act of Havana"—which requires ratification by two-thirds of the nations to become operative—makes it the right and duty of one or more American countries to act in any emergency to prevent other foreign powers from gaining a foothold in the American colonies of vanquished European motherlands.

This, in effect, means that the United States would be assured in advance that the other American republics would approve of steps taken under the Monroe Doctrine.

The patient, persuasive Secretary Hull called the peace commission back to a late night session to pass on a Colombian amendment to the previously approved convention but after a short session Colombia withdrew the amendment and the convention was finally approved.

This amendment would have restored a provision in the original draft advocated by the United States for a three-man commission actually to administer any colony taken over.

But the major task which Hull set for himself has been accomplished already with the peace commission's actions.

Adoption by the plenary session of the conference tomorrow is regarded as only a formality.

Approves Report

At the same time, the economic commission approved a report embracing positive measures to fortify the American economic system by making the republics sufficiently independent of foreign markets to scorn any attempted dictation of trade terms or methods by foreign powers.

An authoritative source said the "Act of Havana" would provide that if any American nation considered danger to a European colony imminent, immediate consultations would be called to take measures for an "administrative" protectorate over the colony, provided there was agreement that it was under threat of outside influence.

Embraces Compromise

This source said that the main part of the agreement embraces a compromise on Argentina's insistence that the question of mandates depend on the will of the European possession in question, but that it does not require a plebiscite or other form of referendum.

Hull, Leopold Melo, Argentine delegate, and Cuban Foreign Minister Miguel Campa were smiling broadly as they walked out of the peace subcommittee meet-

Miss Perkins' Aid to Aliens Is Censured

Small Businessmen Charge She Saved 700 'Deportables'

By the United Press

Chicago, July 28.—The National Small Business Men's Association charged tonight that more than 700 aliens guilty of deportable offenses have been granted exemptions from deportation by Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins.

Donald Despain, vice president of the association, said in a prepared statement that "practically all" of the aliens committed a felony by entering the United States illegally. His statement was accompanied by an official State Department list of the aliens and the charges against them.

"Instead of deporting these aliens, Secretary Perkins devised elaborate methods to keep them permanently in the United States. They were advised to move temporarily to Mexico or Canada, there to request new incoming visas, which then were approved by the Labor Department under special discretionary provisions of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917," Despain said.

"Section three of the act provided that an alien who had lived seven

If It Gets to Floor

D. C. Suffrage Bill Will Pass In Either House, Leaders Say

Legislation to give the District national representation will be passed if it reaches the floor of either House, Congressional leaders predicted last night.

Senator Barkley, the majority leader, who previously had declared himself in favor of permitting Washington residents to name representatives to Congress and to choose Presidential electors, said he believed sentiment in the Senate is strong enough in favor of the proposition to insure passage of the necessary constitutional amendment.

A two-thirds vote in both Houses is necessary for adoption of a Congressional resolution proposing a constitutional amendment, Barkley pointed out.

Representative Earl C. Michener (Republican), of Michigan, a member of the House for 20 years and a veteran of the Judiciary Committee, which tomorrow will meet to consider the Sumners resolution for District suffrage, said he was certain the legislation would pass "if the resolution comes to the floor of the House."

Michener went even further and predicted ratification of the proposed amendment by the States. For his own part, he said he preferred not to disclose his own stand until the time comes to vote on the proposal.

Michener revealed, however, a belief that adoption of the resolution may not mean as much for the

Falling Limb Hits Car as Driver Steps on the Gas

Miss Vera E. Adams, of 514 Nineteenth street northwest, a War Department employe, thought fast, but wrong, last night.

Driving out Nineteenth street northwest, she heard a crackling sound above, as if the limb of a tree was breaking. She stepped on the gas, but it would have been better if she had stepped on the brake.

A 25-foot long dead limb, about 8 inches around, landed on her car, breaking the windshield and damaging the hood, fender and grill.

Glass particles went down her back and into her shoes, but Miss Adams was unhurt.

Bullitt Faces Slight Operation

Fire-Truck Driver Hurt as Sudden Stop Unseats Him

A fireman was injured yesterday when he fell from the hook and ladder truck he was driving, after stopping the vehicle suddenly to avoid striking an oil truck at Forty-second and Jenifer streets northwest.

The fireman, Arthur C. Benson, 53, of Bethesda, Md., connected with No. 20 Engine House, was admitted to Georgetown Hospital for observation. His condition was reported as not serious.

Driver of the truck which Benson sought to avoid striking was Arthur T. Lawrence, 33, of 1903 T street southeast, who was arrested by No. 8 Precinct police and charged with failure to give right of way to a fire engine. He was released on $25 bond and is scheduled to appear in police court today.

The fire truck was on the way to a trash fire in the 5300 block of Forty-second street when the accident occurred.

Hitler Directs Balkan States In 'New Order'

Bulgarian, Rumanian, Hungarian Envoys Meet With Him in Alps

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 28.—In his lofty retreat in the Bavarian Alps Fuehrer Hitler today laid down rules for his "new order" in southeastern Europe to a fourth set of statesmen from that troubled area, while his military aides brought him reports of new German successes in the battle for England.

The German "Lord of Battle" was informed that his Stukas (dive-bombers) had added an auxiliary cruiser, two destroyers and a 5,000-ton merchantman to the list of ships they have sent to the bottom; that Nazi planes had bombed Swansea Harbor and various airports in Cornwall, and that a German submarine attacking a convoy sank five armed ships totaling 458,000 tons.

But foreign conjectures that Hitler was about to launch his long-heralded invasion on England in the next day or two were discouraged by authorized sources here. They said they were "unaware" of the reported stoppage of railway traffic between occupied and unoccupied France, which had aroused widespread interest as a possible tip-off to mobilization of trains and troops for the grand assault.

Ushered into the spacious hall of the Fuehrer's mountain home this time were three Slovak political leaders—President Joseph Tiso, Prime Minister Vojtech Tuka and Propaganda Minister Sano Mach.

They followed in successive days the statement of Rumania and Bulgaria in the series of pilgrimages to the now dominating figure of Europe. Previously the representa-

Vichy, France, July 28.—The Germans today virtually closed the door between the occupied and the unoccupied zones of France until further notice.

The official announcement opening with the words "By order of the occupying authorities" emanates from the national railroads, but it is understood that travel by public highway has been suspended also. Reference to mail trains in the announcement seems to imply that postal communications likewise have been interrupted.

No reasons are given. Many people link the announcement with the German operations against Britain, but the connection strikes military experts as scarcely obvious. Other possible reasons come to mind, all governed by the blanket proviso in the armistice terms, reserving to the Germans "the rights of an occupying power." Mani-

Nazi Diplomat In Havana Reports Dynamite Threat

As U. S. Grows Up

Planning Board Visions 1980 Population of 158,000,000

The United States will reach a population of about 158,000,000 by 1980, after which the figure will remain approximately stationary or actually decline, the National Resources Planning Board stated yesterday in a report on this country's resources.

Facts and figures concerning population, land, water, minerals, health, education, production and other major resources were discussed in the report from the findings of the board and other Government agencies.

Between 1935 and 1975 the estimated increase in the number of persons 20 to 44 years of age will amount to 6 per cent, the report said, while an increase of 68 per cent is expected in the number of persons 45 to 64 years of age.

"The United States approaches self-sufficiency in its domestic supplies of minerals important for national defense more nearly than any other country," the report said in a discussion of strategic materials. "Furthermore, substitutes could be developed for many uses of almost all strategic materials. In a national emergency, however, the limited domestic supplies would have to be limited."

If national economy had functioned at full capacity between 1929 and 1939, national income might have been 20 to 30 billion dollars a year higher than it was, according to the report. Planning in many fields is necessary to meet full potential productive capacity, it was

Meanwhile, the Yankee delegates really have something to worry about. Nazi salesmen are taking orders from their old customers for fall delivery, so report the Department of Commerce spies in Bogota, Colombia. As if they expected business as usual shortly.

What's worse, they're undercutting us on price, sometimes as much as 50 per cent.

PRIZE ORATION: Of the millions of words spilled here this year on world affairs, probably the most eloquent oration is one made by Congressman Butler Hare, of South Carolina 41 years ago when he was a senior at Newberry College.

He read it into the Record (Page 13,942) the other day. It concludes: "As long as the sentiment of patriotism is kept alive in the human breast and there are men whose hearts are stirred by the love of home and native land, so long will 'universal empire' remain the dream of ambitious genius, the phantom of fools."

"—traps, traps everywhere"

100,000 TRAPS: An eminent business lawyer who wrestles with the Government for wealthy clients estimates that there are now 100,000 regulations which a business man is presumed to know, and ignorance of which is apt to get him into trouble—or into big legal fees.

MISSED LUNCH: A certain high-ranking reserve officer is filled with bitter indignation because this year of all years, with the Republic more or less in peril, he isn't eligible for his usual two weeks of active duty training with the Army.

* * * *

It's all his own fault, he admits; he's two hours shy of the amount of inactive duty to make him eligible for the active training.

If he had attended just one more reserve officers' luncheon and listened to one more speech, he'd have been eligible.

* * * *

$2,000 PATRIOT: Paradoxically, his bitterness is increased because he figures it always costs him $2,000 out of his own pocket in the income he passes up when he takes a fortnight off to polish up his martial muscles and brain cells.

STILL LIFE: Perhaps the most pathetic sight I saw at the Chicago Convention was a big pile of "Scott Lucas for Vice President" banners, placards, signs and cards stacked in a vacant room at the hall.

They were all ready; but Senator Lucas' men never got a chance to use 'em.

DOING MY BIT: In a roundabout sort of way, I'm doing my bit uncomplainingly for the British navy. While the b.w. spends her spare time knitting gigantic long socks for the tars, my socks remain neglected.

But I don't mind; the British navy is still our first line of defense.

PHONEY BOOS: It can't be emphasized too strongly or too often that the booing the evening Henry Wallace was nominated was regimented booing, limited to one section of the hall, spurious and phoney. Several hundred of McHale's two-per-centers, fortified by a few quarts and a few Bankhead men, were under instructions to boo at every mention of Wallace's name.

* * * *

Under decent auspices, of course, they would have been arrested or thrown out of the hall. As the evening wore on and the booze wore off, the boos faded out, too.

It would have been even more disgraceful if the booing had been spontaneous.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: A few members of Congress who have remained in town during the fortnight recess, to save the Republic, are bitter because the ball team has been away for a week. . . .

O'Daniel's Vote Majority Mounts

Texas Governor's Reelection Expected; Connally Wins Again

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., July 28.—The reelection of Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel, who charms voters with hillbilly music and radio oratory, appeared certain as his majority over five other candidates in yesterday's Democratic primary election rose steadily.

With more than two-thirds of an estimated million votes counted, O'Daniel's lead had increased to 53.4 per cent.

Only an unlikely shift in the trend could throw the former flour salesman into a runoff with the second-place candidate, Col. Ernest O. Thompson. The Democratic nomination is tantamount to election in Texas.

Thompson Runs Second

Latest returns to the Texas Election Bureau gave the following totals: O'Daniel, 467,503; Thompson, 185,425; Highway Commissioner Harry Hines, 95,285; Mrs. Miriam (Ma.) Ferguson, 72,392; Railroad Commissioner Jerry Sadler, 48,546, and Cyclone Davis, who campaigned in an Uncle Sam suit, 3,853.

Texas' veteran Tom Connally, who didn't nave time to come home to make a campaign speech, clinched his Senate seat for six more years with a vote of 589,233, over a combined total of 113,747 for two opponents.

Runoffs were indicated in only two of 20 Congressional districts.

Representative Clyde L. Garrett, of Eastland, had 15,271 votes to 13,734 for District Judge Sam Russell, his nearest opponent. Thomas L. Blanton, once known as "the watchdog of the Treasury," was third, with 7,206, while two other candidates had a combined total of 8,371. The count included 11 of 12 counties, 4 complete.

Publisher Takes Lead

Among 12 seeking the seat of Representative Marvin Jones, who did not seek reelection, Deskins Wells, weekly newspaper publisher, had 12,059 to 7,274 for Eugene Worley. In third place was E. T. Miller, of Amarillo, who had 6,046. No other candidate had more than 4,000 in this race, with 26 of 28 counties reporting, 10 complete.

Incumbents who held insurmountable leads included Representatives Martin Dies, Wright Patman, Richard Kleberg, Sam Rayburn and Lindley Beckworth, the "baby of Congress."

Pierce Brooks, of Dallas, led with 151,487 to 142,946 for Olin Culberson, of Austin, in the railroad commission race. The two were high among a field of 18 candidates.

communicated to him their intention of working for his election.

Especially significant is the fact that none of the many telegrams received have made any mention of the Republican Party or platform. They are uniformly "I am for Willkie" messages.

Among those received today was one from Claude Chandler, of San Diego, who reported that he was a delegate at large for President Roosevelt in the 1932 California primary and actively campaigned for the President again in 1936.

"President Roosevelt's acceptance of the nomination for the third term has shocked and disappointed me," Chandler wired, "I could not believe it possible that any American holding that high and exalted office would thus violate the trust placed in him to guard and protect our sacred liberties and democratic institutions.

Pledges Support

"I shall support your candidacy knowing in my heart that I will be aiding in the election of a President who has a better understanding of the patriotic duty of true Americans."

For the balance of this week, the candidate expects to stick to the task of preparing his acceptance speech, drafting and revising until he is satisfied with it.

He expects to remain here until next Sunday when he leaves for Des Moines.

White House Letters on Spending For Defense May Be Major Issue

By International News Service

Letters from the White House advising members of Congress what amounts of the $14,000,000,000 national defense fund are being spent in their States threatened last night to become a major political issue.

TINKHAM

Taking instant umbrage at the White House letter, Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, served notice on the Administration that he will demand a public statement by the Congressional Democratic leadership telling the Nation that the defense program is being supported as strongly by Republicans as by members of the Democratic party.

"The defense of our Nation," Tinkham said, "has never been a partisan issue. The Republican members of Congress are just as much concerned as are the Democrats in preparing our Nation for any challenge by a foreign power.

"We still have before Congress two bills which are essential to the Nation's defense. One calls for additional expenditures of $4,880,000,000. The other would impose excess profits taxes. Before these measures reach a vote in the House I will insist that Democratic leaders make a public statement telling the Nation that these are not democratic bills, but are supported as much by Republicans as by members of the other side of the aisle."

President Roosevelt, cruising off Norfolk, Va., wrestled with one of the major problems in his bid for a third term selection of a successor to Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley, whose resignation will become effective August 17.

A subcommittee of the Democratic National Committee will call upon Mr. Roosevelt Thursday for advice on Farley's successor.

Among names advanced as possible successors are those of Edward J. Flynn, New York Democratic national committeemen, head of the subcommittee; Paul V. McNutt, Social Security administrator who withdrew from the Democratic Vice Presidential race when Mr. Roosevelt gave Secretary of Agriculture Wallace the White House blessing; Frank C. Walker, former Democratic national treasurer, and Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Britain.

By the United Press

A twin-edged offensive against the third term is expected to be initiated by two anti-New Deal Congressional Democrats this week as the 1940 Presidential campaign swings into full stride.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, plans to call a Judiciary subcommittee together to hold hearings on his resolution for a constitutional amendment to limit Presidential service to one term of six years. He has scores of witnesses who want to be heard.

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, intends to introduce his resolution placing the Senate on record against or for a third term, unless he again is dissuaded. The last vote on this issue came in 1928 when the Senate, by a vote of 56 to 26, approved an anti-third-term resolution introduced by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

with the rival C. I. O.

Charging that the appointment of Tracy "can be explained only on the grounds that politics are being given preference over the public interest," Emspak called attention to an indictment returned at San Francisco last December 18, in which Tracy was among 36 persons charged with conspiring to "increase, regulate, dictate and control" bids on installation and repair of electrical systems.

"This is the kind of man . . ." Emspak continued, "whose deeds are now rewarded by a high Government post."

Replying, Tracy told the Associated Press that "I don't think Emspak's protest will be given any consideration because the people here know his record and because the indictment was thoroughly investigated before my appointment was made."

He charged that Emspak "naturally opposes the appointment . . . because he is undertaking to destroy the American labor movement."

FDIC May Reduce Bank Assessments

Capital and Surplus Of Federal Agency Shows Increase

Because the capital and surplus of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation may increase to about $500,000,000 by the end of 1940, the management may consider a "reasonable reduction in the rate of assessment paid by banks," the mid-year report, released yesterday, indicates.

Meanwhile, the report also revealed that the corporation has brought near completion its program for the rehabilitation of insurance banks in the system that have constituted a hazard. Outlays in the first six months of 1940 totaled $80,000,000, the largest for any six-month period since the beginning of deposit insurance.

A report of the board of directors for the six months ended June 30 shows that from the beginning of deposit insurance on January 1, 1934, through June 30, 1940, the corporation cleaned up 342 banks having deposits of more than $431,000,000 and 1,111,536 depositors. The corporation's outlays for protection of depositors in these cases totaled $220,000,000. Of this amount about $46,000,000, or about 21 per cent, is estimated as the eventual loss.

Although F. D. I. C. outlays in the first six months totaled $80,000,000, the surplus of the corporation rose by about $15,676,000 to $180,265,000.

The report shows that protection of all but 1,651 of the 1,111,535 depositors was extended in the 342 insured banks closed or merged with the aid of the F. D. I. C. loans through June 30, 1940. Total deposits of these banks were $431,000,000, of which 97.8 per cent was made promptly available.

In the first six months of 1940, the number of insured banks was reduced by 55. Only 27 banks were admitted to deposit insurance, while 82 were eliminated.

The income of the corporation amounted to $27,382,078 for the six months ended June 30, 1940, of which $22,415,429 represented assessments paid by insured banks and $4,966,648 represented interest earned, after deducting provision for amortization of premiums and profits on securities sold. Expenses and losses during this period amounted to $11,706,212, including deposit insurance losses and expenses of $9,973,971 and administrative expenses and other charges of $1,732,241.

New York, July 28 (INS).—Czecho-Slovakia's "thorough and systematic annihilation" under the guise of "Nazi protection" was described at the World's Fair today by Vladimir S. Hurban, Czech minister at Washington.

Speaking at Czecho-Slovakian Day exercises at the Fair, Hurban said that there was "absolute evidence of the physical annihilation of our men and women, but we cannot make these facts public because they are so incredible that we would be acused of inventing them to discredit the German nation."

Battle Over Draft Bill Brews in Senate

more than ten days. Should the debate extend beyond that period, the Army might have to defer its plans for calling into service 400,000 men on October 1, with prior registration of the estimated 42,000,000 men between 18 and 64 who would be required under the measure to register.

Senate Republicans also were reported to be behind a move to amend the bill to provide that only men between 21 and 25 would be called for training. Some of them also were favorable to Senator Lodge's proposal for an Army of 750,000 men, obtained through a call of only the youngest men registered.

The House Military Affairs Committee, also considering the Burke-Wadsworth bill, will hear on Tuesday the opinions of Secretary of War Stimson on the legislation. Representative May, of Kentucky, the chairman, hopes to conclude hearings this week. He said that should the Senate pass a bill in substantially the form his committee desires, he might move to take up the Senate version in the House in order to expedite passage.

TVA Bill May Come First

The House plans, meanwhile, to dispose tomorrow of the $25,000,000 TVA dam bill.

This measure, advocated as part of the defense program on the ground that it will facilitate expansion of domestic aluminum resources, it was suggested yesterday, may be called up in the Senate ahead of the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

The House also is scheduled this week to approve the $59,000,000 for construction of naval shore establishments and bases, and Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, Majority floor leader, said yesterday he expected the $4,800,000,000 defense bill to be submitted by the Appropriations Committee before the end of the week.

It was indicated also that the experts of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and of the Treasury Department had advanced their preliminary work on the projected excess profits tax program sufficiently to be hopeful that they could submit completed data to the House Ways and Means Committee late this week or early next week.

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, planned to have his group discuss the problems informally during the week, but pointed out that no formal action could be expected on his side until the House Ways and Means Committee had conducted hearings and gone to work on the new tax bill.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States announced yesterday that it would mail to its membership tomorrow analyses of previous acts, with an expression of hope that difficulties that attended them may be avoided.

The chamber called attention to the fact that the 1921 Revenue Act used invested capital as the basis for the tax. Other proposals are now being made, particularly the use of average earnings over some fixed period of prior years.

The so-called Connally amendment, recently approved by the Senate, but later eliminated, providing for heavy taxes to be applied only when the country is at war, would have allowed the taxpayer, at his option, to compute his taxes either on the invested capital base or to use as a base the average net income for any three of the four years, 1936 to 1939.

"The efforts to levy extremely high rates, with what amounted to grave inequities, created a long continuing state of uncertainty for most businesses," the chamber said.

Compulsory Training Attacked As Move to Build Overseas Army

Congress Leaders, Army Officer Clash In Radio Forum

Speakers were interrupted and feeling ran high, but a clean division of opinion on compulsory military training came out of the confusion and verbal heat of the air-conditioned Willard Room of the Hotel Willard last night.

Congressional leaders and an Army officer, drawing the lines on conscription in the weekly "American Forum of the Air," coast-to-coast broadcast of the Mutual Broadcasting System, declared with equal conviction, on the one hand, that the draft bill is designed to build up an army for service overseas; on the other, that its sole purpose is national defense.

Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, one of the handfull who voted against this country's entrance into the first World War, denounced "policies of intervention" and "this European-minded conscription bill" in his opening statement.

"We have now arrived at the last crossroad before we enter the second World War," he said, "and as far as this Administration is concerned, there is no turning back. For us it is either peace or war."

Points to France

With "No danger from abroad," he said, all that is needed for "true defense" is jobs for all able-bodied persons, fortification of island bases off the Nation's coasts and creation of a separate air service department.

Opening the argument for the other side, Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, pointed to France as an example of the consequences of unpreparedness.

"If Britain goes under," he said, the result will be "a mobilization of all the industrial and military resources of the continent of Europe at the beck and call of the totalitarians—millions of industrial workers, hundreds and hundreds of factories, munition plants and shipyards.

"Aimed at what? World domination. Make no mistake about it. It has been announced time and again in their literature and in their public utterances. And what part of the world will most surely tempt them? What part of the world offers the most attractive invitation for exploitation? Obviously the Western Hemisphere, including, I may add, the Dominion of Canada and British and French possessions in the West Indies."

Informal, extemporaneous discussions which followed the opening statements provided most of the verbal heat.

"A Registration Bill"

Chairman May (Democrat), Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, described the legislation as "not a conscription bill" but "a registration bill" that would take an inventory of the Nation's manpower and "put the right man in the right place" for defense.

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, rebutted with the declaration that the bill "is voluntary—if you don't want to be drafted you can go to jail for five years and pay a fine of $10,000."

"I don't like Hitlerized methods in America to conquer Hitler overseas," said Holt.

"If we are going to need men in the next year, we must get them now," declared Maj. Lewis B. Hershey, secretary of the joint Army and Navy Selective Service Commission.

Conscription was described as "the most serious step" the country has ever taken by Representative Carlson (Republican), of Kansas. "The first step is registration," he declared. "Next comes regimentation, and next is dictatorship." He said conscription would become a permanent fixture, in peace and war.

Holt, Wadsworth Clash

In answer to a question from the audience, Chairman May said he regarded the present situation, "with clouds of war hanging over this hemisphere and conditions throughout the world as they are, a wartime situation rather than one of peacetime."

As time for the broadcast's end drew near, the debaters fairly fought for the microphone.

Senator Holt cried angrily that "there is no reason for beating around the bush. The basis for conscription is to get an army for overseas."

Representative Wadsworth interrupted Holt to refute what he said were "some of the most amazing statements . . . being made here about this bill."

"You've already talked five times," he told Holt.

"And I probably said five times as much as you did," answered Holt.

"In quantity, yes," was Wadsworth's rejoiner. "May I proceed? I want to tell the truth."

Later Lundeen regained the floor to tell Maj. Hershey that "I thought Army officers were here to obey orders and not lay down policies for the Congress."

Forum Director Theodore Granik managed to return the meeting to order in time for the announcer's closing statement.

Ford Is Reported Preparing Vast Plane Work on His Own

By International News Service

Responsible aviation quarters claimed receipt of reports last night that Henry Ford will soon undertake mass production of military airplane engines "on his own," free from provisions of Government contracts.

FORD

Launching an independent business venture, Ford may thus make good his recent announcement that given the "correct circumstances" he could produce 1,000 airplane engines a day, these sources said.

Availability of combat type engines on such a mass scale would conclusively break the most serious "bottle-neck" confronting this Nation in its new, multi-million-dollar attempt to achieve air parity with Germany.

"Ford has by no means backed out of the aircraft picture," informants of International News Service said. "We expect him to enter it on a scale as yet unimagined by the industry."

The Public Works Administration's projects for air defenses and air travel facilities, costing nearly $60,000,000, has been virtually completed, John M. Carmody, Federal Works administrator, announced yesterday.

There have been 383 PWA projects, of which all but 11 have been completed. In addition, there have been 29 non-Federal projects costing $10,711,878 for which PWA made outright grants of 45 per cent.

Hamilton, Ohio, July 28 (INS).—Congressional leaders in the fight for preparedness tonight praised the "Hamilton plan," guaranteeing National Guardsmen full wages while in camp, as a "genuine patriotic movement."

Under the program, differences between a guardsman's pay while in camp and while normally employed are made up from a pool to which every Hamilton employer has contributed.

Latest to indorse the plan are Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and Representative Wadsworth (Democrat), of New York, authors of the conscription bill now before Congress; Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, and Representative Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, also active in defense programs.

Bath, Me., July 28 (AP).—Uncle Sam's determination to prepare his augmented Armada with a minimum of delay was emphasized tonight in orders to have the destroyer Niblack, built here, commissioned next week without customary acceptance trials.

The Niblack, one of six Navy destroyers in various stages of construction at the Bath Iron Works, Inc., was scheduled to have undergone acceptance trials July 23. The trials were delayed because of weather.

Rather than await more favorable conditions the Navy ordered the 1,630-ton fighting craft to the Charlestown Navy Yard next Thursday for commissioning, iron works officials disclosed.

Chicago, July 28 (INS).—A demand that President Roosevelt "tell us what this rattling of the saber means" was voiced today by Avery Brundage, chairman of the Citizens Keep America Out of War Committee, and president of the American Olympic Association.

Brundage, in a public statement, declared:

"The great speed with which the conscription act—apparently carefully prepared in advance in all its minute and multitudinous details, with its vast scope and heavy penalties—has been introduced and is being forced through the Senate, makes American citizens wonder just what is going on behind the scenes."

The committee will sponsor a mass meeting in Chicago's Soldier Field next Sunday. Principal speakers will be Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Senator Clark, of Missouri.

Fist Fights End Political Rally At Warm Springs

Warm Springs, Ga., July 28 (INS). Relations were a bit strained among residents of President Roosevelt's "adopted home" today and a number of persons nursed abrasions as the result of a political rally within the shadow of the "Little White House" that ended in a free-for-all fist fight.

The battle started when followers of Abit Nix, gubernatorial candidate, became enraged when former Gov. Talmadge, one of his primary opponents, scoffed at a newspaper story stating the delegation at yesterday's rally would be so large Talmadge adherents would not dare attend.

The battle royal was finally quelled by police as Talmadge stood on the platform snapping his red suspenders and calling for order.

The one harmonious note sounded at the rally, in which Talmadge and Nix were joined by two other gubernatorial candidates, Hugh Howell and Columbus Roberts, was praise of the Roosevelt administration.

Lightning Splits Historic Pine On Monroe Estate

Charlottesville, Va., July 28.—A bolt of lightning this evening shattered the famous pine at Ashlawn, home of James Monroe, 2 miles beyond Monticello.

The pine, listed in the Hall of Fame of Historic Trees, was brought from abroad by President Monroe 130 years ago. Over 100 feet high and entwined with English ivy, it stood at the entrance of the century-old boxwood garden and near the Piccidilli marble statue of Monroe.

The bolt, the only one observed in the storm which followed the hottest day of the summer, split the giant tree from top to bottom and caused smoke to rise from its base. Employes seated on the lawn sustained slight shocks.

Escape Lightning Bolt

An employe of the City Postoffice, his wife and 4-year-old son escaped unscathed yesterday afternoon when a bolt of lightning smashed two 8-inch posts from the rear porch of their home at 3019 Clinton street northeast.

Earl G. Moffat was asleep in a second-floor bedroom when the lightning struck a tree at the rear of the house, ran along a wire clothes line and hit the porch. His wife and son, Earl, jr., were seated on a sofa in the living room at the time.

Moffat said the porch probably would have to be completely rebuilt.

Authorities attributed the high toll of heat cases to the unusual length as well as the intensity of the heat wave. Beginning on July 19, the city has had only one day on which the Weather Bureau thermometer registered less than 90. That was last Wednesday when the highest reading was 89.

More Storms Likely

Today will be partly cloudy, the Weather Bureau said, with thunderstorms likely to give more temporary relief during the afternoon.

Yesterday's high of 97 was registered at 2 p. m. The lowest reading prior to the storm was 77 to 5 a. m.

In the Nation, the heat wave, unbroken in many regions for a week, has accounted for at least 549 deaths—270 from the heat directly and 279 drownings—the Associated Press reported.

The long-anticipated "cold front," which, moving in from Canada, had considerably cooled the northern portions of the United States, failed to reach Washington. Somewhere between Baltimore and Washington, according to District Forecaster Charles L. Mitchell, the cold mass of Arctic air, already warmed in its slow movement down the continent, met up with a "warm front" from the West. The result was heavy thundershowers in parts of Maryland. Baltimore, for example, had 1.66 inches of rain during the afternoon. Washington, however, got only two-hundredths of an inch rainfall.

A weather freak was reported at Fairfax Station, three miles west of Fairfax in nearby Virginia. Police said a heavy hailstorm fell in that area.

Forecaster Mitchell said last night there was little indication of any new "cold front" moving on Washington within the first half of the week.

Man Tosses Wife On Sizzling Stove

New York, July 28.—Harrison Matthews, 53, colored, was charged with felonious assault today for having struck his step daughter when she intervened as Matthews lifted his wife, Lillie, bodily onto the top of a sizzling stove in the midst of the heat-wave.

According to the girl's complaint, Matthews was arguing with her mother when he suddenly ended the argument by placing his wife on the stove, in which a roast was being prepared. The affair took place at 4:20 p. m., precisely at the time when the weather bureau reported the temperature to be 98.6 degrees.

6 Ministers Oppose Draft Bill, 2 Support Measure in Sermons

Unnecessary In Peacetime, Says Dr. Williams

Six prominent Methodist ministers opposed the proposed conscription bill, and two others supported it, from local and nearby pulpits yesterday.

Several urged exemption of conscientious objectors. Preservation of democracy as opposed to totalitarianism was given as a reason for voluntary service by several speakers.

"I am opposed to the conscription bill as totally unnecessary in peacetime," Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District, Methodist Church, Baltimore Conference, asserted at Congress Street Methodist Church, Georgetown, where he was guest speaker.

"If passed by Congress and signed by the President," he said, "it will mean the downfall of democracy and the triumph of totalitarianism in this country. Voluntary enlistment on a one or two year basis has not even been tried."

"Conscription is not necessary, since we have not determined yet whether we really lack volunteers," contended Dr. Harry W. Burgan at Hamline Methodist Church. He said that "conscription would be a step toward totalitarianism, the very thing we're supposed to be guarding against."

Dr. Burgan insisted also that, had the United States maintained a "real neutrality" during the past year or more, "we would have been in position to make a real contribution to the establishment of peace when Hitler made his recent offer to Great Britain.

Dr. Dela Smith told his parishioners at Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring:

"In a democracy at peace, voluntary enlistment ought to be given a fair trial, through the reduction of the enlistment period from three years to one, before conscription is tried."

"Regardless of what the State Department or the military authorities may think is necessary, we must by all means protect the civil and religious liberties of the people," said the Rev. William A. Keese at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, on American University campus.

"In particular, we must extend to all conscientious objectors, regardless of religious affiliation, the right of exemption."

The Rev. Orris G. Robinson told his Calvary Methodist congregation that he thought "a draft is a poor substitute for the will of a people to preserve their national existence."

"It is an evidence of the failure of the people to create a love for and devotion to an ideal worthy of preservation," he declared. "What we need is a national morale that comes from something within."

If conscription should come, said the Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor of Chevy Chase Methodist Church, opposing such a plan, "the Nation should do all in its power to safeguard the rights and privileges of conscientious objectors."

Industry Cooperates

U. S. Business Ready to Give Compensation to Trainees

Many Companies Pay Employes for Time On Guard Duty, as Well as Vacations; Jobs to Be Held for Returning Conscripts

By the United Press

American industry, already mobilizing its vast resources to produce war material, is cooperating wholeheartedly with the Government's efforts to expand and extend military training of the Nation's manpower, a country-wide survey by the United Press revealed Sunday.

Corporations, big and small, are prepared to eliminate or soften the economic disadvantages which employes, participating in National Guard training or who may be conscripted, ordinarily might suffer.

Many companies have granted compensation to provide employes during their period of Guard service—one week longer this year than last—with pay at least equal to that they received while on their job.

Paid Vacations Provided

Other corporations have made that grant, and, in addition, are giving their "defense" employes regular paid vacations, and are continuing their benefit, sick leave and group insurance plans.

Some companies already have formulated preliminary policies to aid employes who may be conscripted. Others have the subject under consideration.

Here is what some of the corporations are doing:

The General Motors Corporation is paying hourly workers $3.50 per day for the three weeks they attend National Guard camp. Salaried employes are being paid for two or three weeks which they attend camp, but are granted two additional weeks of paid vacation, one of which may be used during their third week of training. Last year encampment pay was limited to two weeks.

U. S. Steel Pays Difference

U. S. Steel Corporation's major operating subsidiary, the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, is granting National Guard employes 15-day leave of absence and making up the difference between the worker's regular pay and Government compensation. The third week is at the employe's own expense but may be applied against regular vacation allowances.

Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. is granting employes called up for guard service three weeks' compensatory pay in addition to regular paid vacations. The personnel manager of the company said it had already decided to give job guarantees to employes who enlist or are conscripted and that present group life insurance will be continued without extra charge.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey said that its employes in New Jersey who are conscripted will receive for the first three months the difference between their salaries and Government pay. All company benefits will remain in force during the three-month period. Employe members of the National Guard will receive three weeks' adjusted pay.

3 Months' Leave With Pay

Texas Corporation and its subsidiaries will grant leave of absence with compensatory pay for periods up to three months to employes who attend training camps of the National Guard, Naval Militia, organized reserves of the United States Naval Reserve and the Marine Corps. All company benefits will hold for three months.

R. H. Macy & Co., New York department store, is granting its guard employes three weeks' compensatory pay.

American Telephone & Telegraph subsidiaries are giving their employes three weeks' compensatory pay. Consolidated Edison, one of the biggest employers in New York State, is following a similar policy.

Exchanges Alter Rules

International Business Machines Corp., will grant employes compensatory pay for a maximum training period of 30 days.

The New York Stock and Curb Exchanges, as well as most of the commodity exchanges, have amended their rules to give trainees three weeks' pay, instead of two weeks as last year.

The Smaller Business Association of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut announced that it would ask "large and small" employers to save the jobs of those men drafted into military service and to make up the difference between their job and army pay.

Some of the country's biggest distillers have informed their employes that they will receive full salary and expenses if they attend citizens military traning camps this summer.

ing where the draft of the act had been painstakingly prepared.

The full peace commission met at the capitol tonight under Hull's chairmanship to examine the draft which already has been hailed as a victory for "solidarity of the Americas."

"The whole nature of the agreements will be strong enough to surprise all who thought this conference would not accomplish anything," one representative said.

T'R FOR ADD 2

Melo, whose country, some observers thought, might balk at the trusteeship proposal, commented:

"With our work here we have put ourselves on a strong juridicial basis which means that tomorrow we can confront any situation with strength."

To Call On Roosevelt

Melo said his own work was completed and announced that he would sail Wednesday on a United Fruit liner to Washington to present a letter from Argentine President Roberto M. Ortiz to President Roosevelt.

Melo disclosed that one Argentine point written into the commission's draft for mandates was that protectorate nations must establish an administration commission for any possessions taken over temporarily. This, he said, would prevent any American nation from actually holding possession, and would return the territory when the conditions of danger no longer existed.

Asked what nation or nations would be charged with enforcement of the "Act of Havana," one member of the peace commission said the plan stipulates that whatever nation or nations are best equipped to do so will be responsible for enforcement.

Britain Satisfied, Says Paper

London, July 28 (AP).—The Sunday Observer said today Britain is satisfied with the decision of the Pan-American Conference at Havana concerning control of European-held colonies in the Western World "because of its strikingly unanimous front against Germany."

The newspaper added, however, that the conference "has not found it easy to abandon the traditional prejudice against Washington."

Admit Prediction Failure

Madrid, July 28 (INS).—The Fascist Madrid press today tacitly admitted that its prediction of the failure of the Havana Pan-American Conference had been wrong.

Arriba front-paged the statement that "Argentina had accepted the United States proposals," while Ya asserted "it appears Argentina has accepted a compromise."

Results "Nil," Rome Told

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, July 28.—The results of the Havana Conference were "perfectly nil" writes Mario Appelius in Signor Mussolini's newspaper, the Popolo d'Italia, and this is an opinion which the rest of the Italian press shares.

"Two concrete facts emerged from the conference," Appelius says. "First, the territorial revindications of Guatemala and Argentina for British Honduras and the Falkland Islands; and, second, that the American nations do not follow the United States in their solidarity of race, religion and money with England."

Indeed, Appelius reaches the conclusion that the American countries "will be impelled by their instinct of preservation to seek friends among the armed colossi of the other continents. The European and inter-American policy of President Roosevelt has completely missed fire."

British 'Calumny' Assailed in Spain

Madrid, July 28 (AP).—Spanish newspapers attacked today what they called the "uninterrupted campaign of calumny" against Spain in the British press.

The tripartite agreement reached July 24 between England, Portugal and Spain, under which Spain hopes to get sufficient wheat for her own needs, despite the British blockade of Continental Europe, finally was announced in today's papers, but tucked away obscurely on inside pages. Britain was identified in the announcements only as a "third power."

Richmond, Va., July 28 (AP).—The in-hospital population of the State hospital system for mental patients increased 387, or 3.7 per cent, in the last fiscal year, compared with 3.2 per cent for the previous two years, it was reported today.

The British Poll

'No Peace With Hitler,' Said British People Even Before Speech by Lord Halifax

The author of the following article, the Director of the British Institute of Public Opinion, has just arrived in the United States for a short stay. The British Institute is an independent, non-governmental fact-finding organization which operates in England much as the American Institute of Public Opinion does in this country.—Ed.

By Dr. Henry Durant

Director, British Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 28.—If Adolf Hitler had read the results of a survey not long ago—conducted among rank-and-file Britishers by the British Institute of Public Opinion—he might have guessed the answer to his peace offer last week, without waiting for Lord Halifax's speech.

The rank-and-file Britons said "No peace with Hitler."

For that matter, if Hitler had watched the same measurements of British public opinion a year ago, he would have had no excuse for thinking the British would abandon Poland last September. Last summer British opinion affirmed by a large majority that if Poland were attacked, England should fight.

Vital Changes in Life

The war which came last September has made vital changes in the life of the average Briton, but it has not altered his desire for freedom of speech, nor for an unshackled public opinion. That is why, despite airraids, blackouts and the threat of fifth columns, an independent organization like the British Institute of Public Opinion has been able to continue its peacetime job of measuring and reporting British sentiment throughout 11 months of war.

Results of the surveys have been published throughout the war in the London News-Chronicle, an important London newspaper directed by Sir Walter Layton.

No Government Censorship

At no point has the British Institute suffered from government censorship. It is within the discretion of the newspapers to submit or not to submit their copy for censorship. None of our results have been submitted and there have been no official protests. However, the maintenance of a scientific cross-examination and the interviewing itself presented certain difficulties.

The large movements of population, due to the successive evacuations, to young men joining the army, to women of all ages taking up war work, complicated the procedure of taking a cross-section. We work on the same principles as the American Institute of Public Opinion in this country, endeavoring to have all groups properly represented in our sample. Hence, these large shifts of people continually force us to make adjustments in our calculations.

Nazis Imitated Institute

Again, it has not always been easy for our interviewers to get the answers to our polls. The government has constantly warned the public against giving information to strangers. Moreover, the Nazis attempted an imitation of our work this spring by broadcasting reports for awhile of a so-called "Institute of British Opinion" from a radio station allegedly functioning in England.

The Nazis deliberately gave to their fake organizations a name almost identical with ours, so that the public, when approached by our interviewers, might easily be confused. As a result, one of our women reporters found both civil and military police lying in wait for her. She was working in an area which had just been bombed, and her interviewing activities of the previous day had been denounced to the authorities. She was able to convince them without trouble that she was not a German spy. Her experience is typical of that of other investigators. In all cases, whatever difficulties were experienced, we were able to establish our good faith with the police and the military intelligence.

Oppose Peace Negotiations

Throughout these last ten months British public opinion on war and peace has been fairly constant. There has been little doubt in the minds of the people that the war has to be fought out. Last September there was virtual unanimity on this point. During the lull on the Western front some minority groups began to favor the beginning of negotiations for peace. But when the battle began in earnest, skepticism and hesitations disappeared. The desire to fight it out to the end was again common among the people. They are, at this moment, firmly against negotiations for peace.

Their growing understanding that the struggle cannot be avoided is reflected in the reversal of their attitude towards Mr. Chamberlain. Until the German invasion of Norway, a majority accepted his lead and his interpretation of events. From then onwards they saw in appeasement not merely a lost but also a fatal policy.

When war broke out, 65 per cent said that they approved of Mr. Chamberlain as Prime Minister. In March, 1940, 57 per cent still said so. But after the evacuation of Norway his popularity dropped to 32 per cent.

Now 77 per cent insist that Mr. Chamberlain leave the Cabinet altogether. In appraising these figures one should not forget that the British people are stubborn in their loyalties and do not lightly discard their leaders.

The answer to the vital questions on war and peoce show very little division of opinion, except for different degrees of emphasis. Those groups who are likely to suffer most are least martial in their attitudes. Throughout, the young have been less militant than the old, and the women, of course, less so than the men. On more detailed questions on the conduct of the war, both at the foreign and domestic fronts, opinion has been more divided. Institute polls made it possible for the people to voice their reaction to rationing, evacuation and saving schemes, to changes in government and to the "Dig for Victory" program.

Changes in family life and income structure have also been registered by the surveys. The public have responded like a free people, saying what they thought, and thinking with remarkable realism. Our very existence and the evidence collected are a good testimony that British democracy is still alive.

Hitler Dictates Balkan 'New Order'

tives of Hungary had participated in political conferences with German leaders.

What role Slovakia is to play in the grand reshuffle of the Balkans still is uncertain, but there have been near-revolt arguments between Slovakia and Hungary over border troubles since the disintegration of Czecho-Slovakia more than a year ago.

Germany has acted as a guardian of Slovak independence since then, and Reichsmarshal Goering's National Zeitung today carried a hint that Hungary might have to take such factors into account in pressing for return of territories she lost in the World War.

Germans Back Bulgaria

The National Zeitung said satisfaction of Bulgaria's claim on Rumania's southern Dobruja was a necessity of the "new order," but added that Hungary (which demands primarily the return of Transylvania from Rumania) will have to "undertake certain reductions" in her ambitions.

It was not clear whether this referred to Transylvania, or to Slovakia, which was under Hungarian rule before the World War.

Whatever Hungary does or does not get out of the New Deal in southeastern Europe, the National Zeitung made clear Rumania must prepare herself for sacrifice.

"The obvious injustices done to Hungary in the founding of (postwar) Rumania," the paper said, "constitute a continual cause of dangerous tensions and must be eliminated if beneficial peace for both nations is to be ushered in."

Talks to Begin Soon

Budapest, Hungary, July 28 (AP). On instructions from Adolf Hitler, Rumania was expected tonight to initiate without delay conversations with Hungary and Bulgaria for settling the Transylvania and Dobruja questions.

Informed persons said the general lines for settlement of both territorial disputes, the former with Hungary and the latter with Bulgaria, were laid down by Germany at the week-end conferences of Balkan diplomats at Salzburg, but that the affected countries were left to work out details "in a manner which will make lasting peace possible in southeastern Europe."

Bulgaria was reported to have been told that she could have back only the Southern Dobruja, which she lost to Rumania in the second Balkan War in 1913, and must leave Rumania an outlet to the Black Sea in the Constanta region.

This would bar any common frontier between Russia and Bulgaria.

Hungary, it is understood, will get some but not all of Transylvania, the territory she lost to Rumania in World War settlements. Extensive population transfers may be involved.

consecutive years in the United States, and had maintained his American residence during temporary absence in a foreign land, might be readmitted to this country, in the discretion of the Secretary of Labor, without regard to certain exclusion laws. By the gross abuse of this old and forgotten discretionary authority, the Department of Labor has contrived to prevent the deportation of criminal aliens, as specifically required by other sections of the immigration statutes."

Despain said that some of the aliens who were readmitted to the United States "by this illegal device," had been deported previously as Communist agitators.

"Having later reentered the country illegally," he said, "these Communists now have the formal official protection of the Labor Department, by virtue of the abuse of Secretary Perkins' discretionary authority.

"Instead of using the immigration laws to protect the United States, the department, in at least 700 cases, has distorted them to shelter deportable criminal aliens. Undoubtedly there are many more cases of this sort throughout the country, which have not yet come to the notice of the country."

British Buy Plane To Haul Aluminum

New York, July 28 (INS).—Purchase by Great Britain of a huge flying boat belonging to Dr. Richard Archbold, American scientist, was announced today by the Aviation League of the United States.

The ship will be used to transport vitally needed aluminum from the United States to England. The first voyage will be made this week, when the craft—named the Cuba—will fly a three-and-a-half-ton cargo of the metal across the Atlantic. Twice weekly trips will be made thereafter, it was stated.

festly this proviso is very elastic.

The Germans in recent days have been tightening their control over travel between the two zones with the consequence that the line of automobiles awaiting passage has been increasing again after a notable reduction for several days. The measure applies also to Dutch, Belgian and Luxembourg nationals.

[Authorized sources in Berlin told the Associated Press they were unaware of any stoppage of rail service between occupied and unoccupied France and said they attached no special significance to the report.

[On May 9, the day preceding the Navi invasion of the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg, all German railroads were put under command of the army and civilian travel sharply restricted. Days prior to this the German press launched a campaign to discourage civilian use of the railroads during the Whitsuntide holidays, which fell on the next week-end.]

French Protest on Leaflets

Vichy, July 28 (AP).—The French government sent an "energetic" protest to Britain today against the dropping of propaganda leaflets by British aircraft over France and French possessions in North Africa. The leaflets were declared injurious to the regime of Marshal Phillipe Petain.

(British Minister of Information Alfred Duff Cooper told the House of Commons last Wednesday Britain would continue her leaflet raids over French territory, "to convey to the French people the real facts of the situation"—particularly facts concerning seizure of the French fleet.)

The French press, without calling Britain by name, joined almost unanimously in charging "foreign intrusion" into French national politics brought on the war with Germany and its "disastrous outcome."

done, mentioning the bombardment of a Welsh golf course and a farm's outbuildings.

Greatest of the Sunday battles was an hour-long, 60-plane dogfight which accounted for five of the German attackers and in which the foes flashed and wheeled so high in the cloud-flecked skies above the southeast coast that ground watchers could scarcely see them.

The air ministry reported the use of bombs by German fighter planes was a new stunt, tried first during the week-end. It contended this employment of single-seaters was unsuccessful, but indicated that the Germans were trying to avoid the heavy toll taken of the slower, ponderous bombing planes.

Dive Out of Clouds

The Messerschmitt 109 fighters, "fitted to carry a high explosive bomb, fly in high and dive out of the clouds to drop their bombs and then try to make for home before British fighters can catch them," the ministry said:

In Sunday's big air battle waves of Messerschmitts took advantage of a blinding sun, darting down from a height of almost 6 miles.

The Spitfires quickly rose to intercept them, the air ministry said. One of the five German raiders shot down exploded in mid-air.

Striking back with steady, punishing air blows at the Reich, the air ministry announced that objectives of raids Saturday night had included the Nord See Canal in north Holland, barges at Stavoren in Freisland which possibly were being collected to ferry Nazi troops across the Channel to England, eight air fields in Holland and Germany, two supply ships off the Norwegian and Dutch coasts, and oil depots and docks at Hamburg, Amsterdam, Wilhelmshaven and Bremen in Germany.

American-built Lockheed Hudsons were credited with having damaged the German supply ships and shot down a Messerschmitt which attempted to stop them.

Despite the intensity of the German attack and the constant blows at Britain's sea lanes observers expressed the opinion that full-dress bid for victory in one mighty smash would be held back awaiting rearrangement of the Balkan chessboard under Axis guidance.

The battle over southeastern England, which gained in fury as more and more defense planes raced from their bases to beat off the raiders, was fought so high the planes could hardly be seen.

Four raiders were shot down, two at sea, and the others several miles inland. Two parachutes were seen floating from one of the machines downed over water, and motorboats went to the rescue. No bombs were dropped.

Prime Minister Churchill is expected to speak on foreign affairs in Commons Tuesday, but it was not known whether his talk would be made publicy or in a closed session. the British government delivered a protest yesterday to Rumania against "various recent actions"—probably including confiscation of British Rumanian oil properties and supplies, seizure of tankers and stoppage of British oil shipments on the Danube river.

Russian Attitude Obscure

Judging by the cordiality accorded Rumanian representatives at Salzburg, Germany, and in Rome, London observers said the territorial demands against Rumania probably would not be too severe.

As summed up here, the indications point to a German attempt to establish better understanding between Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria, to gear up the Balkan economic output, and to close the Reich's Balkan back door against threats of further trouble during the expected attack on England.

Russia's obscure attitude toward the Balkan situation was interpreted here as one of "lying low" to watch developments, while at the same time determined to block Germany from the Black Sea.

Prisoner Slays Police Chief

Olney, Ill., July 28 (AP).—Chief of Police William H. Armsey, 57, of Olney, was shot to death and Sheriff Harvey Moore, of Richland County, was wounded seriously today after they had subdued and handcuffed a former inmate of an insane asylum, wanted on a charge of assaulting another officer.

State Highway Patrolman Jesse Shipley later arrested Wesley Scranton, 37, whom he identified as the assailant. Scranton, who had freed himself of the handcuffs, offered no resistance and was taken to the Jasper County jail at Newton, 20 miles away, as a precaution against mob violence.

Italians Hold Out A Greater Albania

Fascists Courting Members of Race in Yugoslavia, Greece

Copyright by New York Times

Skoplje, Yugoslavia, July 28.—A map delineating the frontiers of a greater Albania which includes large sections of Greece and Yugoslavia is being circulated in Italy's newest province and posted in such gathering places as barber shops and cafes.

It is a natural assumption that this map is intended to convince Albanians that the Rome government expects to enlarge their frontiers and group all regions inhabited by the Albanian speaking people into a single territory, presumably under Fascist domination.

Districts which by implication would be included in the expanded territory comprise most of the northern Greek province of Epirus running considerably south of the city of Jannina as well as the major part of the Yugoslav province of South Serbia and some land running as far north as Nish.

According to the map—lettered in the Albanian language—the new frontier would extend almost as far east as the present borders of Bulgaria and would include the important Yugoslav towns of Nish, Bitolj and Skoplje.

Busy in Yugoslavia

At the same time Italy is working hard to convince Yugoslavias Albanian minority—between 600,000 and 900,000—that their fellows under Italian rule are leading a far better life. The propaganda points out that current wages for road labor in Albania are almost double what they are in Yugoslavia. This is an important source of cash for Albanians.

Efforts also are being made to stir up resentment against the work of the Yugoslav land reform commission which is colonizing Slavs in the region of South Serbia near the Albanian border.

Italian agents are trying to foment discontent among Albanians being transferred from their villages, and also are working hard on Roman Catholic Albanians in the general Macedonian area.

British Stir Up Strife

Italy is now believed to have an army of about 120,000 in Albania and there is no indication it will decrease. Yugoslavia is continuing work on fortifications, particularly around Bitolj and Devar, and sizeable concentrations of troops are stationed between Skoplje and Ochrid.

There is every reason to believe that England is thinking to cause difficulties to the Italian authorities in Albania, and that all is not going too well is proven by the news that last week an Italian battalion traveling on the road between Scutari and Kukus was attacked from ambush by Albanians. No details of the combat are available.

Some English strategists had hoped to stir up rebellion against the Italian authorities, July 15, which was to have been simultaneously timed with a planned uprising in Ethiopia, Syria and the Czech Protectorate.

Nucleus for Revolt

Difficulties of organizing such disorders were enough to prevent realization of any such ideas, but France's defeat ended all thought of it. Nevertheless, the British and the Yugoslavs hope that road demolition preparations in Albania could delay any Italian advance toward Salonika were such a move ever attempted.

The nucleus for an Albanian revolt exists in this country, where a secret Albanian committee is working on the idea. Without mentioning names, it can be said that the leader of the revolutionary committee is a well known Albanian who is using a small Albanian village in Yugoslavia as a base for his activities. He claims that 12 chieftains of Albanian mountain tribes in the north have now sworn allegiance to his movement.

Anti-British, Petain Regime Seeks to Retain U. S. Amity

Government Built on Totalitarian Pattern Nevertheless Contains Much That Is Basically French; Geared to a Continental Economy

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, July 28.—The fundamental revolution which the government of Marshal Petain has outlined for France is partly a program borrowed from foreign totalitarian sources, partly original, of an anti-British trend in its foreign policy, and frankly geared to the Nazi economic machine.

It has been stated publicly that the program must be adapted to circumstances. The circumstances are that France, defeated in war, at least for the time being is dependent both economically and politically.

There is no secret about this. France asked for and obtained the armistice. The dictators of the armistice terms are Germany and Italy.

Many New Ideas

Therefore, French spokesmen say, there need be no hidden motive behind French projects, and no hesitancy in adopting a system that has been tried in other countries.

But they say their program, by no means limited to imported ideas, will embrace much that is basically and originally French. The revolution, as a whole, is branded "A La Francaise," thought it may include such items as a single-party system, corporation-style chambers and an all-powerful executive.

In a nutshell, that which has been brought out to date regarding the plans of the present government is that it will have none of the old parliamentary system, will have continuous executive power, will not tolerate stalemates between labor and capital, will insist on a more organized national life, and will emphasize discipline.

Tone Is Continental

If Germany wins the war, the French economic policy can be expected to orientate itself toward a greater continental compactness, with France concentrating on agricultural production and depending on Germany to a great extent in an industrial sense.

In foreign policy, a continental tone is evident. There is a pointed anti-British tendency, but a noticeable desire to maintain good relations with America.

Authorized quarters like to make known their distinction between the policy toward America and that toward Britain.

As for interior policy, particularly question from abroad concerning the status of Jews, Catholics and Freemasons, little can be stated definitely. There appears to be no agitation against the church; there is open objection in influential circles to Freemasonry, and the extent to which the Jewish question will be carried still is not clarified.

Latvia Sovietizes Ships, Bars Calls to U. S.

Stockholm, July 28.—In pursuit of its Sovietization policy the Latvian government has now also nationalized the Latvian merchant flet. All captains henceforth will take orders only from the Latvian government.

A special order forbids all Latvian ships to touch American or British ports, presumably to prevent their seizure by foreign investors in Latvia whose investments are now doubtful.

Dr. Peabody Urges X-Ray Chest Tests For Army, Navy

Urging that all members of the Nation's military service and all new recruits be given an X-ray examination of the chest, Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, president of the District Tuberculosis Association, yesterday pointed out that "tuberculosis among veterans has cost the United States more than one billion dollars since the World War."

"Last year, 22 years after the World War, 11,268 veterans were treated in veterans' sanatoria for tuberculosis."

Dr. Peabody, who is also national vice president of the American College of Chest Physicians, in an address over Station WOL said it was not a criticism of military methods during the World War since the rapid, inexpensive X-ray methods of today were not then available.

Japan Arrests Nine British Businessmen

Reasons Undisclosed; Diplomatic Protest From London Expected

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, July 28.—Nine prominent British businessmen in Japan were reported authoritatively tonight to have been arrested by Japanese authorities in raids in five cities.

Reasons for the arrests, reportedly kept secret in Tokyo, were not disclosed.

[Authoritative British quarters in London confirmed the Shanghai reports. It is expected Britain will make diplomatic representations.]

The nine were said to have been seized Saturday, coincident with the disclosure here that Melville James Cox, Reuters (British news agency) correspondent, had been taken into custody for "military reasons."

The businessmen were identified as C. H. N. James, retired naval officer and chief representative in Japan of the British Federation of Industries; J. R. Drummond, F. M. Jonas, E. W. James, J. F. James, two brothers named Ringer, a Mr. Holder, president of the British association, and H. C. MacNaughton.

There was no word what action was planned against the nine, or whether diplomatic moves had succeeded in obtaining the release of Cox.

Reuters said British Ambassador Craigie was to attempt to obtain the correspondent's release through Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matuoka.

Japanese authorities were believed to have banned publication of news about the Cox case and the arrests of the businessmen.

Considerable significance was attached to his sudden decision to return to report to his government just at this time when the United States has imposed export licenses upon oil and scrap iron shipments.

Chinese Strongholds Fall

Tokyo (Monday), July 29 (INS).—The Chinese coastal strongholds of Swabue and Makung, about 60 miles east of Britain's Hongkong colony, were captured by landing parties of Japanese marines with a violent attack, the navy announced early today.

Occupation of the two towns carried closer toward completion the Japanese offensive to seize the southeastern stretch of China's coast which was still under control and in use by the Chungking regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Girl Scouts Leave For Camp Today

Sixty-five Girl Scouts will leave at 7:30 a. m. today to attend the third session at Camp May Flather, in the North River Gap of George Washington National Forest, near Harrisonburg, Va.

Many of these girls have been attending the Girl Scout day camp at Fort Dupont during the past four weeks. They now will start a period of mountain camp life.

The buses that transport the campers from Washington today will return from the camp in the evening with 90 girls. Mrs. Joel Watson, chairman of the camp committee, announces that some vacancies still exist for the last session, which runs from August 12 to August 26.

2 British Submarines Reported Sunk by Warship in Adriatic

By the Associated Press

Susak, Yugoslavia, July 28.—Heavy cannonading rattled windows in this border town opposite Italian Fiume early today.

Reports from across the frontier said British planes had bombed Trieste, Pola and Udine.

It was also reported that two British submarines which had entered the upper Adriatic were sunk by an Italian warship.

Claim Fleet Bombarded

Rome, July 28 (AP).—The Italian high command reported today successful land forays against the British in East Africa, "effective bombardment" of British fleet units in the eastern Mediterranean, and new attacks on Malta and Alexandria.

The daily communique said some prisoners, including a group commander, were captured along with four armored cars in an attack on a British armored caravan beyond the Libyan-Egyptian border.

"Serious losses" were reported inflicted on a strong British detachment at Bumbade, on the border of Ethiopia and the Egyptian Sudan where the blue Nile curves northward.

The communique made no mention of the capture of Curmuk, British frontier customs station 50 miles below this point, as reported yesterday by the newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia.

Navy Contracts For 4-Engined Patrol Bombers

San Diego, Calif., July 28 (AP).—The Navy announced today it had asked Consolidated Aircraft Corporation to rush construction of a squadron of 30-ton four-engined long-range patrol bombers.

The huge airboats would be the first squadron of their design to be delivered to the Navy and if found satisfactory would supplant the twin-motored bombers in service with the fleet patrol wings. Six are to be delivered to patrol squadron 12 at the Naval Air Station here this fall.

The new bombers have a cruising range of 5,000 miles, carrying a crew of nine and several tons of bombs. With a speed in excess of 200 miles an hour, they are rated the fastest aircraft of their type in the world.

Socialized U. S. Urged for Defense

New York, July 29 (AP).—Socialization of American industrial life was called for today by the Socialist national executive committee as an essential step for national defense.

A statement by the committee, including Socialist Presidential Candidate Norman Thomas and his running mate, Maynard C. Krueger, declared:

"The history of the present war has demonstrated one basic truth—that the problem of national defense can be solved only on the basis of economic reorganization."

Sidelights on the War

Russia Marks Navy Day With Exercises

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 28.—Soviet Russia celebrated national navy day with marine exercises and parades in the Pacific, Baltic, Black Sea, Caspian and far-north areas today while newspapers hammered home assertions the Red Navy soon will be second to none in the world.

The commissar of ship-building, Ivan Kossenko, declared that by 1942 "Soviet dockyards will win one of the world's first places in annual production of tonnage." Last night Admiral Nikolai Kuznetzoff, commissar of navy, said Russia would add 168 warships to her fleet this year. He urged that Russian sea-power be stepped up to parity with the country's army and air strength.

Admiral Kuznetzoff in a speech referred to former defense Commissar Marshal Voroshiloff as "our immediate superior," indicating that Voroshiloff as vice-chairman of the council of commissars in coordinating and directing the various phases of national defense.

The money has been donated by individuals or by organizations and communities in sums ranging from 1 shilling to several thousand pounds.

France to Prohibit Use of Private Autos

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Vichy, France, July 28.—Declaring that "gasoline will be our bread this coming winter," Rene Belin, French minister of industrial production and labor, said measures would be taken shortly to prohibit the use of private automobiles in France.

"Our supplies of gasoline are very limited, the destruction in the war and the abusive requisitions have diminished these stocks in considerable proportion. What we have left we must jealously preserve for agricultural work and for the crops. Gasoline is needed to feed our tractors, for without this there would be no crops and without crops there would be no bread."

Scandinavian States To Survive, Envoy Says

Des Moines, Iowa, July 28 (AP).—"I am convinced the day will come when we can speak of the Northlands as the United States of Scandinavia," declared Henrik de Kauffman, Denmark's Minister to the United States, at the seventh annual Scandinavian-American Day at the Iowa SState Fair Grounds here today.

"The Scandinavian countries," De Kauffman continued, "will survive the hard test and emerge from the present trying period more united than ever."

Swedish Premier Scorns Nazi Union

Stockholm, July 28.—Premier Hansson today flatly rejected the proposal of Nazi Party Philosopher Dr. Alfred Rosenberg to incorporate Sweden into the "Greater Germanic Unity" which German power politics is now trying to carry out in practice. Hansson again declared that Sweden was determined and strong enough to safeguard her neutrality and independence.

Relief For Refugees

The fall of France and the subsequent extension of Britain's continental blockade creates a difficult problem as to the distribution of supplies voted by the United States Government to relieve the destitute refugees of Europe. President Roosevelt's order providing for the purchase of $50,000,000 of foodstuffs and other supplies for delivery to the Red Cross makes it necessary for us to face this dilemma. We must realize, too, that modern wars leave little scope for the expression of humanitarian instincts.

In wars of attrition like that now in progress, where the weapon of the economic blockade may prove decisive in determining the outcome, women and children endure privation along with men. Civilians as well as soldiers suffer. Great Britain cannot be expected to relax her blockade of the continent to the extent of perceptibly increasing the economic resources of her enemy any more than Germany can be expected voluntarily to lift her siege of Great Britain.

However, the situation is far from hopeless. The first task is to find out what concessions the British are willing to make and then seek to secure guarantees of safe conduct for supply ships through the naval blockade. It does not seem that Germany would be indirectly benefited to any extent by letting food and medical supplies reach children in the unoccupied part of France. Indeed, it is reported that negotiations with the British to permit such entry are being considered. Such requests would be quite as reasonable as appeals to Germany not to molest ships carrying British children to this country.

The Red Cross does not wish to limit its efforts to a single country or to children only. It was the intention of Congress in providing funds for relief of the destitute to include all ages, in occupied as well as unoccupied territory.

In regions under German domination, however, a question will undoubtedly arise as to whether aid directly given by the Red Cross might not indirectly increase the food reserves of Germany. Thus the British will have to weigh their desire to support our humanitarian proposals against the military risks of permitting supplies to pass into occupied territory. The Red Cross would in any case have to secure permission from Germany to distribute supplies without interference.

The United States participated in the blockade of Germany during the World War, and is in no position to sit in judgment on the belligerents because they are today employing the same weapon against each other. Our task is not to criticize or condemn, but to try to effect a working arrangement that will enable Red Cross supplies to go where they are most needed.

Alarm In The Reich

Secure behind the West Wall, residents of the Harz Mountains had nothing to fear from Frenchmen at war. But, since the Franco-German armistice was signed and the frontier reopened, they foresee a dly incursion of the sort the Nazis perpetrated on nations with which they had no quarrel.

According to a report from Berlin, the doughty mountaineers have formed a "Seventh Column" to combat the invader, whose name—oddly enough—indicates an American origin. He is the Colorado potato bug.

So far as present information goes, not one of these dangerous aliens has been discovered in the Reich, where nationalities are subject to rigid scrutiny. Fear of contamination arises because of the proximity of this region to France. Zealous Nazis are searching hard, however, and a reward of 40 marks has been offered to the member of the anti-insect Gestapo who apprehends and informs upon the first potato bug.

No doubt the culprit, when found, will be purged with characteristic Nazi efficiency. It would be presumptuous for citizens of a democracy to suggest means of destruction to a regime whose talents in that line have been so effectively demonstrated. In fact, many an American, remembering boyhood experiences with Paris green sprays and cans of kerosene, would welcome the announcement that German scientists had discovered a better way to kill a potato bug than by squashing him.

Conscientious Objectors

The conscription bill reported out of the Senate Military Affairs Committee exempts from combat training and service any person whom "by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form." Objectors establishing their claims would be assigned to noncombatant service. Or if found to be opposed to participation in war in any form, they would be assigned to "work of national importance under civilian direction."

These provisions are much more liberal than those of the 1917 draft act which gave exemption from military service only to members of religious sects recognized as opposed to war. Moreover, conscientious objectors were not then exempted from noncombatant service in the Army. As a result, certain of the so-called "absolutists" who refused to wear uniforms or obey military orders were court-martialed and received severe sentences. The mistreatment of some of these recalcitrant objectors is a dark chapter in the history of the last war which should never be repeated.

Despite the relative liberality of the Senate conscription bill, in respect to conscientious objectors, it is not as broad in its exemptions as the British National Service Act of 1939. The latter includes all conscientious objectors, regardless of whether their scruples are based on religious belief or simply on humanitarian considerations. Moreover, the British law recognizes a class of absolute objectors who are unwilling to accept even assignments to civil work under civilian control.

Great Britain may have shown excessive leniency to this extreme group, considering that the nation is engaged in a war calling for mobilization of all its resources. However, the practical effect of making concessions to such extremists is not great, and the United States, especially under a peacetime draft, could well afford to be equally generous with conscientious objectors. The British have also set us a good example by recognizing the fact that conscientious objections to war do not invariably spring from religious beliefs.

Under the British system local tribunals determine whether applicants for exemption are sincere in their professed abhorrence of war. Under the Senate bill the Department of Justice would be empowered to conduct hearings "regarding the character and good faith of the objection." Of course, this administrative machinery would have to be most carefully supervised to assure fair and objective treatment of all. The Department of Justice appears to be the logical agency for this assignment if draft legislation is passed. Certainly the handling of conscientious objectors should not be left to the military authorities who, in the nature of the case, are likely to be prejudiced.

It is unquestionably the duty of every citizen to defend his country if called upon to do so. On rigid legal grounds, therefore, the case for exemption of conscientious objectors from compulsory service in a national emergency is very weak. But no liberal government desires to impair or destroy the liberty of conscience of the individual by commanding him to perform acts that do violence to his innermost convictions of what is right.

Furthermore, it is expedient as well as humane to spare the conscientious objector. For an unwilling soldier is seldom a good soldier. Such a man is much more useful to his country in private pursuits than he would be in uniform.

Past experience has shown that a comparatively small number of men seek exemption from military service as conscientious objectors. And most of these are men of courage not easily intimidated by threats of punishment. Many, indeed, are willing to endure martyrdom rather than submit to the draft. Hence the United States stands to gain a great deal more than it can possibly lose by refusing to apply coercion of any kind to the few whose devotion to certain religious principles or pacifistic beliefs takes precedence over the duty of the citizen to defend and fight for his country.

No Threat To Congress

No sound argument can be raised against granting to residents of the District the simple democratic rights which citizens of all other parts of the country enjoy. Once the problem of this voteless community is candidly examined, approval of its plea for suffrage follows automatically in the minds of those who believe in government through consent of the governed.

It must be admitted, however, that some conscientious legislators are concerned about the practical effect of self-government in the Capital City. They fear that if the District is given the right to send its own representatives to Congress and to elect a local city council, operation of the new system may ..metime result in embarrassing the National Government. Undoubtedly that concern prompted Senator Norris' comment last week. "It is essential that Congress shall not relinquish its exclusive guardianship over the National Capital so that it can take control in an emergency."

Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee has given assurance that the interests of the Federal Government will be fully protected in any suffrage legislation that may be approved by his committee. But even if he had not spoken, the bogey of antagonism between Congress and the Capital City could be safely put aside. To divorce Washington from the final control of Congress would be unthinkable. And, of course, that issue has not been raised.

There is no evidence that Virginia has any concern lest Richmond get out of hand and create an embarrassing situation for the State government. Nor is any other State worrying about the rights of home rule exercised by its capital city. For the States have ultimate control over all municipalities within their boundaries. Yet that control is less complete than the authority of Congress over the District.

To raise the question of eliminating this Federal authority over the Capital City is merely to cloud the present issue. All Washington asks is the right to send its representatives to Congress, to participate in Presidential elections and to set up a municipal government under a charter to be granted by Congress. This program would in no way disturb the ultimate authority of Congress over the District in time of emergency or otherwise.

Loophole At Havana

While it is gratifying to learn that an understanding on the chief issues before the Havana Conference of Foreign Ministers has evolved from the discussions of last week, the full significance of the gathering will not be known until the text of the convention has been approved by the delegates and then ratified by their respective governments.

In the meantime, one loophole in the proposed hemispheric defense system is becoming increasingly apparent. The delegates at Havana have decided on a formula to prevent foreign possessions in the New World from falling into hostile hands. They have agreed upon some measure of economic cooperation, and upon ways and means of combating subversive activities. But joint military efforts to resist a common foe appear to have had no place at the conference.

Several explanations of this neglect of military cooperation in the discussions at Havana are offered in the dispatches. One correspondent reports that the technical phases of concerted military action have not been taken up because the delegates do not believe there is any immediate possibility of an attempt to invade the American republics. But this statement is weakened by reports that Brazil, Uruguay and other South American countries are actively seeking military commitments from the United States.

A more logical explanation is that Secretary Hull does not regard this general conference as a proper place for the negotiation of military agreements. Probably more satisfactory mutual defense plans can be worked out through direct negotiations with individual countries. If the resolution on defense policy is broad enough to insure a common understanding on this point, the establishment of bases and the details of cooperation between the military forces of the various republics can no doubt be worked out satisfactorily.

Certainly, however, no program for defense of the Western Hemisphere against any possible aggression would be complete without positive military commitments. Since the United States is by far the strongest of the 21 republics, it is well known that much of the responsibility of defending the Americas will fall upon this country. That obligation cannot be successfully met without the creation of naval and air bases at various strategic points in South America. The duty of building and the right of using such bases in the common defense of the Western Hemisphere ought to be clearly and definitely set forth.

The smaller countries of Latin America know that they are largely dependent upon the United States for their security. Yet it must not be supposed that the benefits of a cooperative defense plan would be wholly theirs. This country must defend the Panama Canal at all costs, and that might be a difficult task if any of the nations near the canal should fall under hostile control.

Our defense program can in no wise be considered complete until positive agreements for defense of the vast area in the neighborhood of the Panama Canal have been signed.

Registered Letters

From the Montgomery Advertiser

It is a hot day. The thermometer registers 94. Notice of registered mail awaiting you, the editor, at the p. o. comes. You mop your brow and say: "Humph! I've fallen for that one before. I'm through making special trips to the p. o. for registered mail. I have never received an urgent or important piece of registered mail in my life, and I'm getting on in years!"

Next day another notice comes. The thermometer says it's 96. You inveigle a colleagu. to go to the p. o. and see what all the shooting is about. He returns with a package of free publicity from a propaganda committee! The committee —representing a worthy cause to be sure —asks the paper if it will print the enclosed publicity.

If the package had borne ordinary first-class postage two days would have been saved.

The Disfranchised

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the author of the antipoll-tax bill which would restore the right to vote to the disfranchised citizens of eight Southern States, I am naturally interested in seeing the base of suffrage broadened wherever possible.

I am in favor of giving the people of the District of Columbia the opportunity to participate in Federal elections. They ought to have the right to vote for President and Vice President. They ought to be able to elect their own Representatives to Congress. There can be no argument against granting these fundamental rights to the citizens of Washington.

Other citizens of our Nation are also disfranchised. In Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia, 75 per cent of the people do not vote. Denied access to the ballot box because a poll tax is a prerequisite for voting, these citizens, like District of Columbia residents, remain outside the orbit of representative government.

I am sure that the restoration of the right of Washingtonians to vote will have a salutary effect on the movement to bring democratic government to the people in the eight poll-tax States.

LEE E. GEYER, M. C.

Hope For Britain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please let me thank the author of "Faith in Britain" for so ably setting forth sentiments which I have found difficult to express. Surely we should give our moral support to Great Britain and discourage this defeatist propaganda of expecting victories for the Nazi gangsters. Wholehearted moral support might even help toward a really effective material aid. And the sooner the better, it seems to me.

There is nothing super about Hitler or his goose-stepping vassals. Hitler has fed on smaller prey until he has increased his pack to formidable strength, to be sure—but it is still a pack of jackals. Only a poverty of vocabulary saves the mixing of metaphors still further.

Oh, yes, Britain is going to win this war. Right and truth are on her side and that is why. To destroy the fundamental law of right, truth and beauty would take more armies of highwaymen than are now at the command of the most abandoned triumvirate of bandits that ever trod the stage of history. A. L. McC.

Wallace's Reason

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By rejecting sound editorial advice of The Post to leave the Cabinet now, owing to retention of that portfolio while encumbered with the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination being certainly incompatible with the public interest, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is doing his party's cause and the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket a distinct disservice. Mr. Wallace declines to get out "because Mr. Hoover remained Secretary of Commerce" while Republican candidate for President in 1928, and even though Mr. Hoover didn't, the categoric intent of Secretary Wallace's unintentional misstatement to the contrary stands.

The one "reason" submitted for a Roosevelt third term is the profound differences in the times—now and hitherto. The President's running mate, Mr. Wallace, nevertheless justifies his acts of now in the alleged ways and processes of then, thus putting the 1940 Democratic standard-bearers in the anomalous positions of allegedly coming forward and certainly going backwards simultaneously.

It is frankly difficult to apprehend how and why one so comparatively young as Secretary Henry A. Wallace got so confused while seeking New Deal precedent among archives of the Republican "ancien regime." His illustrious Pa was Secretary of Agriculture when Mr. Hoover was also Secretary of Commerce in 1924, and "Old Henry's" failing health in midst of the elections of that year prevented President Coolidge's acceptance of Assistant Secretary Gore's resignation, proffered because Mr. Gore was Republican candidate for Governor of West Virginia, at the time Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt resigned to make his unsuccessful race for Governor of New York.

The Post has rendered Secretary Wallace's dual role so untenable that we may soon see his successor heading up the Agriculture Department.

Justice For All

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In spite of everything that has been written regarding the Nazi menace and Nazi propaganda, there seems to be no clear-cut plan for a campaign of counter-propaganda and this is all the more surprising when one thinks of the strength that could be put into it.

One great obstacle in the way of effective work of this kind has been presented, and is being presented still, by some influential members of the present Tory government in England. If this war is being waged, as Mr. Duff Cooper, for instance, has intimated, merely to tear up the German empire—and presumably share the fragments among the victors—then it is not the kind of war, the war to protect democracy, which others have proclaimed it to be, and apart from which America has no interest in it. Indeed, the words and actions of certain British conservatives would lead one to suspect that their minds have not advanced beyond the balance of power ideology, and that they are fighting, not for freedom for all nations, but for the dominance of Britain. While to most of us on this side of the Atlantic the dominance of Britain would be more agreeable than a similar dominance of the Third Reich, we shall as a people never be stirred into profound enthusiasm for one empire rather than another. Perhaps because we are ourselves continental in extent we are able to visualize a world order which will be neither Nazi controlled nor British controlled—nor for that matter American controlled—but an association of free peoples whose freedom is curtailed only by the action of legal processes, an association such as the League of Nations should have been, and such as some of us are determined there yet shall be.

In any case those Americans who are prepared to defend democracy desire, not conquest nor, indeed, punishment, but justice to all nations alike, Germany and Italy included. Unlike some Americans I can contemplate with equanimity "sending our boys across the ocean to be slaughtered" in the cause of justice and world peace, but never to take part in an old-fashioned international brawl. And if the aim of the democracies is justice, as we are given to believe, then let the responsible leadership in England and America draw up statements to that effect in terms that cannot be misunderstood, and let us broadcast them by the printed and the spoken word and the radio until our purposes percolate into the innermost totalitarian sanctums—or rather, into the innermost closets of the German and Italian populace. Let them have an opportunity to lay these purposes side by side with those of their own leadership. It is our and their due. Technically, I know, we are not at war with the Fascist powers, but ideationally we are more at war with them than is England. JOHN R. SWANTON.
Chevy Chase, Md., July 26.

Peace Overtures

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to comment upon the editorial in your issue of July 20 regarding peace overtures by Hitler and their rejection by Churchill.

The words were, "But it must be said that the offer does not seem to be couched in an unreasonable form. It does not suggest British capitulation but apparently only a discussion of terms which Germany is prepared to propose. . . . It is difficult to see why he (Mr. Churchill) should not at least ascertain . . . the precise nature of the peace which Germany would accept."

Now, of course, if we were still living in a world with something of honor prevailing among nations—including Germany; if one nation at war with another might yet trust to the good faith of its adversary—including Germany; then surely you would be quite right. In such case, Mr. Churchill's position would be indefensible. He should listen to what Mr. Hitler has to offer.

But we no longer live in that sort of a world, it has come tumbling about our ears. No list today of nations of honor and good faith could possibly include Germany. Her word has been shown to be utterly unreliable; her promises have proved false and fatal to all who have trusted them.

That being the case, surely Churchill should not for a moment consider overtures from Hitler. You say he should at least stop to get Hitler's terms of peace. Impossible. He could get Hitler's words. That is all. His terms would be whatever later he chose to make them.

Nor can it be urged that if his terms proved unfair or unsecured the truce could then be broken, and the war go on. No, for England on the desperate defensive, that could not be. Up out of such abortive peace measures, even British fighting spirit could not rise to peak again. Indeed, if Churchill should stop now to talk peace with Hitler, he would not only find a faithless adversary but he would be making a fatal military blunder.

FRANK W. HUTCHINS.
Washington, July 25.

The Platforms

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The two political party platforms were evidently framed to please everybody and to offend nobody. Both of them are "verbose deceptions." And both will be impotent in affecting the Presidential vote. The temporary chairman at the Chicago convention proudly proclaimed the creed of democracy "equal rights for all men; special privileges to none," and then proceeded to extol the record of the New Deal during the past seven years in awarding special privileges in billions of dollars to agriculture, other billions in charity and class legislation favorable to union labor!

Here are some democratic principles which might well have been stated in a postal card platform: A strict construction of the Constitution in accordance with the principle that "that government is best which governs least," free trade with all nations, entangling alliances with none. Abolition of all Federal charities, abolition of governmental competition with all private business, genuine civil service reform, together with gradual but steady shifting of taxation from business and industry to the natural source of public revenue, economic rent.

Responsibilities

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: A writer in your issue of July 23 tells me to fulfill my responsibility when I advocate civil liberties (The Post of July 19) in a world threatened by dictatorships. Since I had two years' overseas service with the American Army in the first World War, and have spent much of my life in humanitarian work, I am not aware that I have ever shirked my responsibility. Un-Gentle Reader

AT WHAT POINT does the "gentle reader" become, as it were, "ungentle," even savage? There may be as many answers as there are readers; nevertheless, I venture to say that the most savage are those who, by some circumstance, are deprived of the privilege of reading at meals. Here is a form of slow torture which breaks down even the most persistent good nature.

Do not misunderstand me. I know that reading at meals breaks all right behavior patterns, fractures the precepts of Emily Post, sins against the social canon, irritates everyone except other like sinners, and, for all I know, crashes against Sinai and the statutes of the Medes and Persians.

Where did this practice start? No history of manners enlightens me, but when prehistoric man first began to chisel his memoirs on hunks of rock the habit probably began quite casually, as most habits do. Gnawing an elk steak which Mrs. Primitive had cooked to bring out all its native toughness, Mr. Primitive cast his eye over the ground and saw beside him a stone on which Primitive, jr., had been practicing his homework. He picked it up in his free hand, and found there was something in the practice of reading while he chewed which satisfied some need in his mind. Substitute the morning paper for the rock, and a cup of coffee with toast for the elk meat, and you bring the incident up to 1940.

I acquired the habit at what is called a "tender age." I was supposed to be a delicate child, another way of saying that I disliked every form of nourishment except ice cream and candy. My mother discovered that if I had a book propped up beside me I would consume everything put on my plate without even looking at it. This had its dangers, because the vegetables from our garden might harbor in their crevices animal life of the lower orders which eluded even my mother's watchful eye.

I probably devoured many a hapless worm in the lettuce, but when my mother saw that even worms did not faze me, she wisely concluded that I was a born "reader-at-meals" and she ceased to struggle. So I went on mixing spinach and Oliver Optic with mashed potatoes and R. L. Stevenson. I was as inclusive in my reading as in my food, and I suppose if we would tell the truth most of us would confess that it is only in later years that we develop some discrimination and taste in reading. So I went blithely on, spattering my own books and some from the public library with gravy and preserves.

It was at this time that I incurred the wrath of my relatives who thought quite reasonably that when they visited us I should be able to tear myself away from the Jungle Books and show some manners at table. My mother was inclined to agree and to deprive me of books at these times, but when relatives with their acid comments on "that child" were gone, I gradually subsided into my old ways, and I still think it to my mother's credit that she did not spoil this pleasure with much scolding.

Though this habit is distasteful to people who love to converse over their food, it makes for tolerance, as bad habits often do. I have never been able to work up the usual wail of indignation at the fellow who reads over my shoulder on the bus, because I know for myself that hunger to know what the other fellow is reading. His book always seems more interesting than mine. Maybe he knows some author whom I have missed, and with this awful thought in mind I can pluck up courage to look over the shoulders of the most forbidding people. I am often disappointed to find that so much of the stuff is trash, but I am sometimes rewarded by a new name that sends me hustling to the catalogues. Was it thus that I discovered Merejkowski and the "Notebooks" of Samuel Butler and the autobiographies of Mary Austin and G. B. Stern and Norman Douglas? It was, I think, Vera Brittain who was, rather snobbishly, surprised to find average Americans reading certain medieval tales on the cars and buses.

Many economic reasons are given for the increase in the habit of "eating out" and the decline in housekeeping. I think one reason why civilized persons prefer to eat away from home is that the dictum against reading at meals seems to be softened in the case of the supposedly lonely "diner-out." Unless you flood your neighbor at restaurant or hotel by leaning your book too hard against your glass of water, no one cares if you read from soup to pudding, and you may reach your last drop of black coffee simultaneously with the word, "Finis."

Looking backward, I remember the great bound volumes of St. Nicholas which were a treasure-house to the young, but they had one disadvantage. They we're too large and heavy for mealtimes. To this day, I find myself unconsciously testing the physical desirability of a book by its availability for fitting into my allotted space at table. (Publishers take notice.)

A recent biographer of Keats says: "They saw him now always with a book. . . . There he sat at the table with a volume of Burnet's History between himself and the dishes, dragging his greens, or whatever it was, absently over the open book" (Shades of the gravy and preserves of my childhood!) Then comes this sentence, "His mind had become vulnerable to words."

"Vulnerable to words." I should say so! And this is the state of all "readers-at-meals." We are vulnerable not only to the ideas for which words stand, that train of thought which words have the power to explode, but vulnerable to the physical appearance of letters. So that it is better to be looking over the other fellow's shoulder, to see even broken shapes of words than not to see them at all. And it is immeasurably better to have bread and books than banquets and no printed word. And may Emily Post forgive me!

Welles And Churchill

By K. K. Kawakami

Abolition Of China Extraterritoriality

ON JULY 18 Winston Churchill, Britain's Prime Minister, told the House of Commons that "we are ready to negotiate with the Chinese Government after the conclusion of peace for the abolition of extraterritorial rights, the rendition of concessions and the revision of treaties on a basis of reciprocity and equality."

The following day Mr. Sumner Welles, on behalf of the State Department, announced that "it is this Government's traditional and declared policy and desire to move rapidly by process of orderly negotiation and agreement with the Chinese Government, whenever conditions warrant, toward the relinquishment of extraterritorial rights and of all other rights possessed by this country as by other countries in China by virtue of international agreement."

Comparing the two statements many observers indulged in speculation as to whether they might have been the result of consultation between London and Washington—an irrelevant, unimportant matter. What was really important was the difference in phraseology used by the two statesmen.

SUMNER WELLES
His Condition: Conditions

Mr. Churchill said that Britain would negotiate "after the conclusion of peace" for the abolition of her special rights in China. Mr. Welles, on the other hand, said America would negotiate "whenever conditions warrant."

The termination of the 3-year-old hostilities in China is Britin's only condition for opening negotiations for the abolition of extraterritoriality and foreign concessions. Apparently, Britain is not concerned about who is going to organize what sort of government upon the termination of the undeclared war. Mr. Churchill says that the closing of the Burma road for three months was agreed upon in the hope that this will assist in bringing the hostilities to an end, thus intimating that the cutting off of war supplies to Chiang Kai-shek may force him to seek peace.

True, he adds that the peace terms should be "just and equitable," but he knows very well that no peace which does not recognize Wang Chin-wei's Nanking government as the dominant factor in whatever new government may be organized upon the termination of the war is possible.

SUPPOSE THAT the Chiang Kai-shek government, as a result of the closing of the Burma and other supply routes, coupled with Japan's accelerated aerial assaults upon Chungking, abdicated or merged with the Japanese-sponsored Wang Ching-wei regime at Nanking, and acquiesced in the "new order" which Wang and Japan would establish in "East Asia." Would England, in such circumstances, take steps toward the relinquishment of her special privileges in China? The answer, taking Mr. Churchill's words at their face value, must be in the affirmative.

This is decidedly different from Mr. Welles' proposal to negotiate "whenever conditions warrant." What will be the conditions fulfillment of which America considers necessary for her possible negotiations with China? The answer, in the light of America's past acts and utterances, is not far to seek.

First, America objects to the new-order-in-East-Asia plan, the essence of which seems to be close military, political and economic cooperation between Japan, Manchukuo and China. It is difficult to see how America can attempt to squelch this plan when much the same plan is being hatched in other parts of the world, including the Americas.

Secondly, there is the "non-recognition" doctrine by virtue of which America refuses to recognize Manchukuo or the New China because they have been brought into being by force. As far as Manchukuo is concerned, the doctrine, to all practical purposes, is dead. The trouble is that no burial rites have been held for it. The restless spirit, unable to enter nirvana, goes wandering about plaguing whatever and whoever comes in the way.

Thirdly, America has always contended that the abolition of extraterritoriality must be predicated upon the inauguration of a modern judicial system in China. In 1926 Mr. Silas Strawn, representing the United States on the international commission which investigated the question, wrote a report emphasizing the above contention. In all probability America will stand pat on the same ground.

SO MUCH about the difference between Mr. Welles' and Mr. Churchill's statements. To a student of contemporary diplomacy the two pronouncements are of particular interest in that they call to mind Sir Austen Chamberlain's communication to the American Government in December, 1925, and Secretary Frank B. Kellogg's reply thereto, both made under circumstances somewhat similar to those now prevailing in China. A study of the Chinese crisis of 1926-27 and of the way England met it serves to explain what may appear to many Americans to be inexplicable British acts in the present crisis in China.

In 1926 the Chinese nationalists, led by Chiang Kai-shek and aided by Bolshevist Russia, staged a great anti-British putsch. Hongkong's trade was brought to a standstill, and British interests throughout China and in the Yangtze Valley suffered great loss.

At that time Britain, though still feeling the disastrous effects of the World War, could, if she would, have employed force to check the putsch, for Europe was then tranquil and offered no obstacle to whatever measure Britain would take in the East.

Yet London preferred appeasement to force and permitted nationalist seizure of the British concessions at Hankow, Kiukiang and Chinkiang to go unchallenged. Not only this, but Sir Austen Chamberlain, then foreign secretary, proposed to the powers signatory to the Washington Treaty of 1922, that certain surtaxes which the Nationalists had been laying on imports in violation of that treaty be not merely connived at but explicitly recognized and legalized.

If the Britain of 1926, with no Nazi Germany nor Fascist Italy to menace her, did not feel herself able to take forcible measures in China, how could the Britain of 1940, beset with difficulties nearer home, venture forth to protect her interests in the Far East?

WHEN THE AMERICAN Government received the British proposal to regularize the illegal surtaxes levied by the Nationalists, there was a feeling in official circles—at least it was so reported by some American newspapers—that London had essayed to play "big brother" to China, a role Washington had considered an an American monopoly. In any event Secretary of State Kellogg, responding to the British proposal in a press statement, declared that "the United States is now and has been prepared to enter into negotiations with any government of China or delegates who can speak for China not only for the putting into force of the surtaxes of the Washington Treaty, but entirely releasing tariff control and restoring complete tariff autonomy to China."

WINSTON CHURCHILL
His Condition: Peace

As if to redeem this promise Secretary Kellogg, on July 25, 1928, surprised the world by making public the treaty which was signed by Mr. John V. A. MacMurray, the American Minister to China, and Mr. T. V. Soong, the Nationalist finance minister, and which recognized "the principle of complete tariff autonomy" for China—a move which went beyond what Britain was prepared to grant.

In the light of Secretary Kellogg's statement and his action as described above, Mr. Welles' recent pronouncement that America's traditional policy has been to "move rapidly" by process of orderly negotiation and agreement poses a question. Will America again surprise the world by moving rapidly in China in the not distant future, and if so, in which direction?

In the meantime Tokyo and Nanking will in all probability have concluded a treaty containing a provision that Japan will relinquish her concessions and extraterritorial rights as soon as other powers agree to do likewise.

Duce's Nastiness

WITH AN EAGERNESS which it would be hypocrital to conceal, I await a furious, patriotic outburst in the half-American press through which a few Fascist publishers in the United States blackmail the great community of loyal American citizens who are of Italian blood.

The Roman newspaper, Il Tevere, published on page 1 last Monday an editorial which said that the efforts of the American Army in 1917 and 1918 were farcical and disastrous, and, in the words of one dispatch from Rome, vilified the A. E. F. Il Tevere, of course, speaks only with the permission of the Italian government.

Several times in the last year I have called attention to the anti-American spirit of the press of Italy, and each reminder has been fiercely and obscenely resented by the racket press published in the Italian language in this country.

I INCLUDE in this press some publications of the Sons of Italy, which pretends to be wholly loyal to the U. S. A., but whose own members know that certain mugwumps of half-Americanized politicians have used it to promote their own powers and to obtain cheap decorations from the Italian consuls and valuable commercial favors from the Fascist regime.

To take the slightest exception to the most abusive expressions of Mussolini's papers regarding the American Nation and her people was to reveal "degeneracy" and reminders of the historic Italian military disaster of Caporetto were construed as insulting reflections on all those Americans who came from Italy or whose fathers came from there.

This two-faced press has voiced no objections to the anti-American propaganda in Mussolini's paper, which seriously reflects on all Americans, including those of Italian blood, but the Duce's previous displays of nastiness toward the American people have had the tact to leave the A. E. F. out of the problem.

BUT THESE ANGRY outbursts on behalf of Fascist Italy in the mock-American publications have cited many times the high percentage of American soldiers who were of Italian blood, so the editorial in Il Tevere obviously comes under the head of new business, calling for an important decision. Will these publications at least find a point on which their professed loyalty to the American Nation and their special interest in Americans of Italian blood will compel them to take issue with Mussolini's press? Obviously Il Tevere's editorial is intended to voice a sneer at all members of the American forces, including the large element of Italos.

It is especially unkind to those Americans of Italian blood who were hastily shunted down to Italy to help the French and British turn around the terrified Italians of Italy in their flight toward the toe of the boot. And if it is an act of "degeneracy" to refer again to this painful episode, in which the Italian arms maintained the inglorious traditions of Adowa and established the precedent for Guadalajara, the blame must lie with Il Tevere for printing so bold a reminder of the events of '17.

THE NOT TOO SUBTLE treachery to the American Nation of those journalistic and political padrones who prey upon the large and valuable element of Americans who are of Italian blood has been revealed repeatedly since the Italian press began its anti-American campaign three years ago. The pieces of silver and the soiled and sordid little lapel ribbons which they receive from the Italian consuls are the measure of that American patriotism which they profess in print alongside praise for the Duce and sly contempt for the democratic freedom which enabled them to accumulate money and power.

Actually, they have little influence on the feelings of those to whom they address their propaganda, but the editorial in Il Tevere presents a showdown. Among many others, I shall watch these publications and the remarks of the padrones of the little Italys to note whether their loyalty to the soldiers of this country equals in warmth their anger against those who mention Caporetto. What they say will be important only as an indication of the apportionment of the loyalty of men who presume to speak for all Americans of Italian blood.

By Barnet Nover

Argentina And The U. S.

(Mr. Nover's article was written before the attainment of the compromise he forecasts here.—Editor's note.)

TWENTY-ONE nations are in attendance at the meeting in this city of the foreign ministers of the American republics. This means that there have been, at least potentially, 21 separate points of view to be reconciled before an agreement on any issue could be reached. Actually, the only differences that have mattered here have been those between the United States and Argentina.

This is by no means the first inter-American parley where the United States and the Argentine republic have failed to see eye to eye on all matters. Such clashes of policy and points of view have, in fact, occurred at most of the major gatherings of American republics held during recent years. It was true at Montevideo in 1933, at Buenos Aires in 1936, at Lima a year and a half ago. Nor have those been disappointed who anticipated a similar conflict at the Havana parley. Dr. Leopoldo Melo, Argentina's scholarly representative at the current meeting, arrived here with a chip on his shoulder which the man he was personally representing, Foreign Minister Cantillo, had carefully placed there.

ON THE EVE of the Havana meeting Senor Cantillo had announced that his government would not go along with any plan for the creation of a giant inter-American cartel such as had been tentatively proposed by the Roosevelt Administration some time ago. Nor was Argentina prepared, he let it be known, to give her approval to any arrangement that would lead to a widening of the breach between this hemisphere and Europe. When the present conference met, therefore, it was taken for granted that the chief obstacle in the way of agreement both on political and economic issues would be Argentina.

Actually, the economic problem has proved less thorny than was anticipated largely because the cartel plan to which the Argentinians were so opposed had been thrown out of the window by the United States long before the conference began. Instead, Secretary Hull proposed an arrangement which would preserve the system of free commercial intercourse while supplementing it, for the duration of the present emergency, by special measures. Indeed, the only action the conference is expected to take on the economic issues, and this with the full approval of Argentina, is to turn the problem over for detailed action to the economic and financial committee established at Washington by resolution of the Panama Conference.

THE REAL fight at the conference has been on the crucial issue of the European colonies. As against the plan for the creation of a system of "collective trusteeship" over colonies in this hemisphere which may be subjected to a dangerous transfer of sovereignty, a plan approved by the United States and supported by a great many other nations represented at the current meeting, Argentina had nothing to offer at first but a flat negative.

Argentina, Dr. Melo told the press in an interview in which he sought to explain his country's position on the colonies issue, is opposed to the delegation of hypothetical powers such as was embodied in the United States project Dr. Melo argued that the constitutions of the various American states made such delegation of powers impossible. He suggested, instead, that in the event of a threat arising from the possible transfer of sovereignty over this Havana, or that European colony or possession, the American nations consult together.

IN TAKING this stand Argentina was obviously flying in the face of experience.

To wait until this hemisphere was threatened by a fait accompli before taking any action and have that action depend on the decisions of a hastily summoned conference might be fatal. The lessons of Norway, Belgium and the Netherlands could not so lightheartedly be ignored. Nor were the great majority of the nations represented at the Havana meeting prepared to ignore them. On this issue, therefore, Argentina has found herself more or less isolated.

Under the circumstances, there is every reason to anticipate that a face-saving formula on the colonies question that is satisfactory both to Argentina and the United States will be found before the conference adjourns tomorrow night.

A great many harsh words regarding Argentina's obstructionism have been voiced here. Yet it would be wrong to assume that Dr. Melo and his colleagues have found any pleasure in playing the lone wolf role. On the contrary, they have been as cooperative as their government has permitted them to be. Nor must it be assumed that the position taken by Argentina on the colonies issue has been the product of malevolence, pro-Germanism, anti-Americanism or any other motive other than a desire to preserve Argentina's safety and security and advance her welfare.

More than any other major American nation Argentina is dependent on the European market for her economic survival. Farthest removed from the protecting shelter which the American fleet may provide this hemisphere in the event of an attack from overseas, she is also least interested in the strategic aspects of the colonies problem. For that reason she is least anxious to do anything that might offend those nations which threaten to become the undisputed masters of Europe. And while the bulk of the Argentinian population has been and remains anti-Nazi, that republic is not without its powerful elements, among them sections of the army, which are not unimbued with admiration for the Fuehrer.

It is doubtful, however, whether ideological sympathies with the totalitarian states of Europe have to even a minor extent determined Argentina's role at the conference. Partly habit, partly the product of a sharp bargaining technique which explains why Argentinians are called the "Yankees of the South," partly the result of an unwillingness to play second fiddle to any other nation of the hemisphere, the Argentinian attitude vis-a-vis the United States also rests on the hard facts of geography and economics. And these facts can neither be ignored nor discounted nor changed by expressions of good will or demands for cooperation.

Thoughts On A Vacation

A summer vacation is a period during which you stop working in order to become completely exhausted under your own auspices.

• • • •

It is a period of two or three weeks devoted to proving at your own expense that there is no place like home and that the country is full of places worse than the office.

• • • •

It is an interval of chaos, discomfort, uncertainty and disorder at high rates, and subject to constant association with traffic cops, bad waiters, irritating breakfasts, red ants, damp salt and windows that can be opened only with a crowbar.

• • • •

You can always tell a person just coming back from a vacation from the fact that he looks so much in need of a vacation.

• • • •

Vacations are not compulsory by law, which makes it all the harder to understand why nearly everybody takes them. They can be taken at home amid every comfort and convenience, but people prefer to travel hundreds of miles in heavy traffic to experience the change that comes with a room under a leaky roof, a veranda with the bottom step missing, a bathroom held together by old ropes and a view which they would travel miles to avoid back in home territory.

• • • •

A summer vacation is something that is held to be fairly enjoyable if the hotel uses a bag of coal for a mattress, and a perfect delight if this feature of rural hotel life is supplemented by such things as soggy bread, terrible fish odors and a general penetrating aroma of wet rugs.

• • • •

This is the peak of the great American vacation season. The roads are full of people bound hell-bent for the ordeal and not caring how tough it is as long as it can be taken in slacks, pajamas or bathing suits. Everywhere you look you behold the frenzied trek through the hot-dog and hamburger country to the Land of Corn on the Cob, Ice Cream on the Blueberry Pie and Wasps on the Lace Curtains.

• • • •

New Dealers' Morale

By Ernest K. Lindley

President's Attitude Hurts

THE POLITICAL morale of the Roosevelt Administration is now at its lowest ebb since the week following the 1938 election. It has grown worse in the ten days since the Democratic National Convention.

The latest blow was the forced resignation of Louis Johnson as Assistant Secretary of War. Johnson is popular among regular Democrats, New Dealers, the Washington press corps, and in the American Legion. He had won the confidence of business men with whom he had to deal as head of procurement for the Army, and the respect of the members of the National Defense Advisory Committee. He has energy and enthusiasm, and the overwhelming opinion around Washington was that he was doing a bang-up job. In addition, he had entered the War Department with what he regarded as a promise that he would soon be promoted to the secretaryship as Woodring's successor. For three years he had loyally stuck his neck out whenever requested to do so by the White House, and, like Jim Farley, prior to the 1938 "purge," he had quietly taken the rap when things went wrong.

Yet, having drafted Henry L. Stimson for the War Secretaryship, the President had to honor his request for a new Assistant Secretary. It is readily understandable why Stimson would not feel comfortable with a subordinate who was a candidate for his job, and who knew the War Department better than he did. Robert Porter Patterson, the man Stimson chose, is, moreover, a man of the very highest caliber.

UNQUESTIONABLY the President hated to lose Johnson, and was sincere in urging him to become his administrative assistant in charge of defense. Probably he was surprised when he found that he had stretched Johnson's loyalty too far.

Johnson's departure left even the New Dealers with the uncomfortable feeling that loyalty and ability are poorly rewarded, and it is having repercussions further afield. For the President, however, it is only one more knot in what would seem to be, by ordinary standards, an almost insoluble political tangle.

Jim Farley is showing no signs of revising his decision to leave the cabinet and the national chairmanship on August 17.

Senator Byrnes has firmly repulsed every suggestion that he take on the national chairmanship, and the South Carolina press has been erupting angry editorials at the passing over of Byrnes for the Vice Presidency.

Paul V. McNutt returned to Washington silent, but some of his close friends hint that he may resign his Federal post within a few weeks.

THE FEELINGS of others hurt at the national convention have not yet been assuaged. Even a few prominent Roosevelt lieutenants are sulking. Wallace was not really their man; not one of the inner circle which built up and managed the third-term movement.

The newspaper and magazine reaction to the national convention was even worse than the Roosevelt lieutenants at first realized. And now Fortune has published a poll, taken between the two national conventions, showing Willkie leading Roosevelt in every section of the country except the South, the Southwest and the Mountain area.

The President's attitude toward an admittedly discouraging situation seems curiously different from what would be expected from his behavior in the past. To his intimate aides he has displayed neither the exuberance with which he has challenged and overcome many serious difficulties, nor the Dutch grimness which occasionally comes to the surface when he is hard pressed. He has exhibited, rather, a sort of tough indifference, bordering on fatalism.

He is not, and could not be, indifferent. He has staked too much on his campaign for a third term. Nor is he oblivious to the requirements of practical politics. He showed that by his concessions to the isolationists at Chicago, and by the cautiousness with which he is now conducting foreign policy.

BUT ANXIETY concerning the world situation and its possible effects upon us over- and underlies the President's thoughts on all other subjects. It makes what a Jim Farley does, or what happens to a Louis Johnson, seem less important, personally and politically, than in calmer times.

Even by the hard test of practical politics the President's focus on foreign affairs and national defense may be correct. The impact of world events—whether England goes down or stands, whether Japan strikes at the East Indies—may within a few weeks submerge hurt feelings, bolters, and unhappy recollections of Chicago. What he does in response to such events probably will determine whether Roosevelt is elected or defeated. Consciousness of that accounts, perhaps, for the President's relative calmness in the presence of what, by ordinary standards, would be a baffling political mess.

Ferrying Pilots Visit Capital

PERFECT—but hot—landings came to three aviators and a passenger at the Washington Airport at 11:30 a. m. yesterday.

Flying at 4,000 feet across green, cool mountains from Loch Haven, Pa., to Miami, Fla., they brought their three Cub ships down on the local field, to think in a moment that they had missed it and landed in a furnace.

"It's very warm here," said Mrs. Mary Brooks, one of the fliers and wife of Pete Brooks, noted acrobatic aviator. She was told that this had been the subject of some talk around the town lately.

The thermometer at the airport was reading 100 degrees.

THE aviators were in a flight of five planes from the Piper Aircraft Corporation factory at Miami. Their errand demonstrates the hum of Loch Haven to the Embry-Riddle Flying School at the Nation's airplane industry.

Mrs. Brooks at controls

The flying school, it was said, was too busy to send its instructors for the new ships; the factory was too busy to send its employes on the delivery trip.

MRS. BROOKS volunteered. She completed her private pilot's course a few days ago. This is her first long cross-country trip at the controls. The others were Jack Wantz, a Civilian Pilot Training Program student taking a primary instructor's course at the school; Max Husted, now training for an instructorship in the Government's program; Frank Dew, now taking instrument flying instruction; Ernest Gould, who is flying his own plane, and Charles E. Planck, of an aviation public relations service, a pasenger to Washington. Dew and Gould were delayed in reaching Washington, stopping off in Harrisburg, Pa., with their two planes.

Creating Missiles of Death For America's Defense

1. Defense-conscious America has placed emphasis on the need for more planes, tanks, guns, ships and men but all these would be useless unless supplied with ammunition. Thunderstruck Dog Invades Home

By Charles Mercer

IT was a dog day before the rains came yesterday. And when thunder began to rumble over northeast Washington it was a particular German police dog's day to chase a woman out of her home and hide in her closet while she went for the police.

Miss Ruth Frayser was seated in her living room at 4055 Grant street northeast when she heard a crash in the kitchen. Going to the kitchen door she ran head-on into a large police dog tearing a way through the screen.

MISS FRAYSER left by the front door as the dog bounded through the kitchen. A neighbor, Robert Poetzman, of 4057 Grant street, called police.

The police arrived in a scout car and entered Miss Frayser's home, but no dog could be found. Another clap of thunder brought a whine from a closet. Police met dog, and dog was friendly but unwilling to move.

FINALLY he was cajoled and threatened into the scout car. En route to Eleventh Precinct Station another clap of thunder made him try to claw his way out of the auto. From the precinct the dog went to the Pound, where he was listed as "friendly but homeless."

For lack of a better name, police called his disease "thunderitis."

'Scram, Folks, Letters Don't Mean Nuthin' Here!'

West Coast Studios Dispel Misapprehension; Eunice Supplants Ruby in Jolson Musical; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE WEST COAST STUDIOS, it seems, have been tossed into a dither of large dimensions by a certain statement contained in a syndicated article out of Hollywood, recently given wide circulation in these more or less United States.

BELL

The slightly misleading advice that has thrown up one of filmdom's highest dudgeons was set forth in these words:

"If you can't pull any strings, but still want to see a studio, it can be done without resorting to tricks and by asking only one favor: Go to the manager of your neighborhood theater and ask him to give you a letter. He need not obligate himself in any way or make any request. The letter is entirely for identification and need only say: 'This is John Smith, local citizen and theater patron, who would like to visit a studio.'"

That would seem a little too good to be true—and is. It is the equivalent—or would be—of letting down the studio bars to practically the country's entire theater-going public of 88,000,000 people a week, or whatever the actual figure is at the moment.

That is the way Paramount—first to lodge specific objection with this desk—feels about it, as expressed in these words:

"This statement has caused us quite a lot of trouble and embarassment and probably will continue to do so until the public is informed that it is not true. Your long connection with film production will enable you to understand that if the Paramount studio in Hollywood extended visitor privileges to all persons presenting letters from theater managers, the studio would be so crowded with visitors that no work could be done. If such courtesies as the writer describes could be extended, Paramount would be happy to do so, but such a blanket rule of admission to visitors is simply impossible. At this time, as in the past, the Paramount studio cannot welcome visitors, except the working press, and it would be very deeply appreciated if you could make this fact known through the widely read motion picture department of The Washington Post."

So there it is, much as we hate to heave a monkey wrench into your vacation plans—if any. It ought to take a bit of wear and tear off the necks of the theater managers, too, who, otherwise, not only would embarass themselves but the patrons for whom they might seek to do a friendly favor.

Even a parachutist would have a tough time trying to crash the sacred precincts of the moom pitcher plants these days.

As you may have noticed, it is that dismayingly dexterous juggler, Val Setz, who is in the spot originally reserved for Eunice Healey in Gene Ford's "Crazy Show" revue, at Loew's Capitol this week. Miss Healey, clever dancer and a favorite with Washington theatergoers by reason of numerous past appearances here as a solo artiste and teamed with Paul Haakon, has a perfect alibi for her absence. She has leaped to Chicago on short notice to step into the role abruptly vacated by Ruby Keeler in the new Al Jolson musical, "Hold Onto Your Hats," a smash hit in the Middle West.

Speaking of the "Crazy Show," Jay C. Flippen, the pun-popping pippin, headlining the lunacy and acting as its madcap master of ceremonies, has resigned from the presidency of the American Guild of Vaudeville Artists, a post he has held since a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. Hope I haven't ruined your night's sleep.

A second tabulation of the ballots to determine the all-request "Sing-a-Song-with Mike" program, to be presented by Head-Canary Eileen Ritter at the Earle the week of August 2, has turned up the following five tunes for you to try over on has turned up the following five tunes for you to try over on your vocal cords, voted in the order named: "The Woodpecker Song," "God Bless America," "Playmates," "If I Didn't Care" and "Tuxedo Junction." But this isn't necessarily final. A week of voting still remains, so "Oh, Johnny" may get back up there yet —Heaven forbid!

"The Count of Monte Cristo," costarring Robert Donat and Elissa Landi—and where has she been all this time?—will follow "The Biscuit Eater" at the Little Theater. "The Biscuit Eater," now in its second week, has proved the outstanding "sleeper" of the season—a picture that has been acclaimed as nearly perfect as such things ever get. Incidentally, the Little management encountered so much difficulty in running down a print of "The Count of Monte Cristo" that the implication is that its forthcoming showing on Ninth street may be its last. Which would be too bad.

After dangling the thing before our noses for days on end now, the Warner Brothers finally announce August 30 as the premiere date for "The Sea Hawk," costarring Errol Flynn and Brenda Marshall. The supporting cast is even more distinguished than the one that appeared with the late Milton Sills in the old silent version—which is very top-drawer indeed.

No Dull Spots On New Bill At Trans-Lux

Foreign and Domestic News Is Augmented By Splendid Shorts

A great short-reel bill at the Trans-Lux this week.

Highlights in the news pictorials are splendid shots of the British Mediterranean fleet defending itself from heavy attack, and views of Britain's amazing defense plan—Britain all set for invasion. There are flashes of the French fleet in British harbors. On the other side, Mussolini is caught by the cameramen, reviewing Alpine troops, and there are spectacular action sequences of the Italian fleet.

American defense rallies approbation as aircraft propellers are seen in mass production, and as West Point cadets test their ability with big coast guns.

Variety Is Stressed

Politically, there is the nomination for the Vice Presidency of Secretary Wallace, and the President is shown making his speech accepting the "draft" nomination and, in another shot, accepting honors from the society of Odd Fellows. Secretary Hull is pictured as he addresses the Pan-American Conference, and Wendell Willkie is shown being cheered at the Cheyenne rodeo. There is a generous sprinkling of comedy events through the news pictorials.

In the "short" section a remarkable picturization entitled "Air Army" is as interesting as it is timely. After viewing it, you will know a lot about our "flying fortresses" and our versatile pursuit planes, and you will experience some pleasant amazement. The travelogue is about Mura, India and Rangoon, particularly, and it proves highly interesting. A new "Screen Snapshots" is presided over by the truly funny Ken Murray. It serves to introduce at their favorite sports Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Jack Holt, Rudy Vallee, Joan Bennett, Loretta Young and others. The cartoon, "Mr. Duck Steps Out," is Walt Disney at his best.

Director'sGagTops Curry, Rice Diet

Jerome Cowan has vowed never to accept another screen role that calls for him to eat. At least, if it is eating curry and rice.

He's been gobbling it down for two days now for scenes in "Victory." Fredric March and Betty Field, also in the scene, just watch him. At noon, Cowan strolled into the studio commissary and ordered up a cool, tempting salad. He got a dish of curry and rice—specially ordered for him by Director John Cromwell.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 28.

THIS IS THE STORY being told in Washington, concerning the French Embassy's appeal to this Government to protest against Britain's capture of the French fleet . . . The French diplomat delivered his message, and was met with silence. He repeated his message, and urged that America protest Britain's action against the free people of France . . . The American spokesman said he didn't believe the French people were free now—to which the French diplomat objected . . . "This message of yours," he was asked, "how did you receive it?" . . . "From Paris—via Berlin," he replied . . . "And how will you make your report?" he was asked . . . "To Paris," he informed, "—via Berlin."

BERNT BALCHEN, the flier who was in charge of purchasing planes for Finland, will receive an important aviation post in the United States Government service . . . Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who is a member of the Naval Reserves, will take a training-cruise shortly with the naval reserve unit to which he belongs . . . The limitation on profits in war industries is being removed.

MILTON BERLE, who recently submitted to a plastic operation in which he had his nose prettified, is in Hollywood now . . . On Sunday Berle went to the Beverly Hills Tennis Club, and exhibited his new profile . . . "How d'ya like it fellas?" he asked. "Y'know—I've had my nose shortened" . . . "Who did it?" asked Groucho Marx. "Gutzon Borglum?"

ROSCOE TURNER, who suffered severe injuries in an Indianapolis auto collision last week, was on his way at the time, to offer air-taxi service to Wendell Willkie, for the duration of the campaign . . . Brian Donlevy, the film actor, asked for an autograph for the first time in his life. He asked for, and received, Ernest Hemingway's autograph, at the Stork Club . . . Sam Goldwyn, who is head of the motion picture division of the Red Cross, addressed an executive meeting, and said: "Now look, fellows. We're going to run this in a democratic way. Whatever I say, goes" . . . A few minutes later he glanced across the room and asked: "Who's sitting in that empty chair?"

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT is beginning to recognize the fact that when the oath of naturalization is administered to an alien, it shouldn't be done in wholesale fashion—with hundreds of new citizens taking the oath at one time, while the presiding judge mumbles the words unintelligibly. The officials realize that naturalization should be made a spiritual adventure, a ceremony of deep import to the man who forswears his fealty to homeland, and vows allegiance to his new country . . . Corrective measures are being taken. The plan now being considered provides for nonsalaried commissioners—appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, on recommendation of the Attorney General—who will discuss Americanization with each alien, alone, before administering to him individually, the oath of naturalization.

JEROME KERN and Oscar Hammerstein permitted a scriptwriter to adapt their show, "Very Warm for May," which wasn't successful on Broadway. Columbia Films now is interested in producing the movie version. The authors have a busy season planned. They're writing a new musical about San Francisco in the '90s; Kern is writing another one with Ira Gershwin, and Hammerstein is writing one with Sigmund Romberg . . . John Walters, the American representative of the London Mirror, became the parent of a boy, born here last week. Louis Ruppel, C. B. S.'s publicity director, sent flowers and a card reading: "It isn't every baby who may become both the President of the U. S. and Prime Minister of England" . . . Capt. Patterson, of the N. Y. News, who for years advocated a "Two Ships for One" policy, is being mentioned for a post as Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

THE OPERATORS of the Fiesta Danceteria, fired with patriotism, inaugurated a movement to change the name of the dish, Chicken-a-la-king to Chicken-a-la-President. They decided to seek the backing of the Daughters of the American Revolution in making this an alimentary "God Bless America" . . . A phone call, therefore, was put through to the home of Mrs. George Duffy, at Fort Plain, N. Y., State regent of the D. A. R. Mrs. Duffy was away, but another lady who answered the phone was apprised of its high purpose. "Call back in November," she suggested. "If Willkie is elected, it should be changed to 'Chicken-a-la-President.' If Roosevelt wins a third term, then it should remain 'Chicken-a-la-King.'"

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 28 (INS).—Madeleine Carroll, who was one of the "nicey-nicey" leading ladies until E. H. Griffith put her in such torrid numbers as "Honeymoon in Bali," gets the hottest role of her career in "Buildo Cay." Have not any idea what the title means, but this novel, by Nelson Hays, has been acquired by Paramount to costar Madeleine and Fred MacMurray. Like the proverbial Green Bay tree the team of Carroll and MacMuray seems to flourish at the box-office—so much so that Ed Griffith will produce and direct this new number as soon as he finishes "Virginia," with the two of them.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Speaking of that "Virginia" location, now shooting in the name State, they tell me it's hotter than heck down there. Madeleine, who was more than a little on the plump side when she made "My Son, My Son," has melted away 12 pounds which is all right, for she is so beautiful when she is svelte and thin.

Three guesses on the role Burgess Meredith plays in "Second Chorus." He was signed last week, you know, in a featured spot opposite Fred Astaire and Paulette Goddard. I got a kick when I was told that Burgess will be a trumpet player and he is delighted. Like many people he has always had a secret desire to play in a band—a far cry from the artistic-soul, starved lad in "Winterset," but then Burgess is versatile. The picture starts Monday and Burgess, who has been in New York, is on his way here to report to H. C. Potter, director.

"Four Cheers for Mother," the new Phil Dunning play, which had more bidders to the square inch than any new play in years, has been nabbed by Jack Warner. I don't know when a stage vehicle that hasn't even been seen in New York yet, has inspired so much interest as this story of a father and mother, daughters and sons, who turn servants when they lose their money. The play has a little of the flavor of "Four Daughters," which, I suppose, is what made Warners so eager to buy it. The temporary cast, as it stands now, is Olivia de Havilland, Brenda Marshall and Peggy Diggins for the daughters. They are pushing Peggy and wait until you see her—she is really lovely.

I heard an interesting little tidbit recently that concerns David Selznick, who is spending part of his time in New York. He is terrifically interested in Carol Bruce, the young actress who made such a sensation in "Louisiana Purchase," and is also one of the attractions at the Pierre. David would like to make a musical with the Bruce girl as a star. He told one of his friends that he hopes to have an unusual musical for his next picture. David will certainly have to do something smashing, after "Gone With the Wind" and "Rebecca," and I think he is sensible to take his time to decide what he wants to do.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Sally Sage, Bette Davis' stand-in, is keeping dates with Cliff Hutchinson. She was formerly wed to John Shelton; Russell Birdwell escorted Loretta Young and Tom Lewis to the marriage license bureau to get their license. Last time he did that job he went with Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Mary Lee Epping; Rita Hayward has been ordered on a milk diet to gain 10 pounds. Some people have all the luck; Edgar (Slow Burn) Kennedy did anything but a slow burn when he made a hole in one at the Lakeside Golf Club; Alice White is taking her alimony fight against Cy Bartlett into court next week.

Attorney Milton Golden and Carole Parker are an item; she was once Dennis O'Keefe's heart beat; Jack Lawrence, Samuel Goldwyn's chief assistant, left last night for Texas to arrange for the premiere of "The Westerner," Mr. G's last picture with Gary Cooper; Claudette Colbert, who has been greatly worried about her aunt and uncle in France, has had word they are living in an occupied area but are perfectly well.

Edith Fellows goes to New York for a musical this fall after her contract with Columbia expires; Elsie, the glamour bovine, expects her blessed event in the next two days; Mae Murray with her lawyer, Milan Medigovich, talking like mad at the Tail o' the Cock; Reginald Gardiner, a backstage caller on Gertie Lawrence. They are old friends; Bing Crosby plans to pull the same stunt he did last year—invite the press to be his guests at Del Mar for the preview of "Rhythm on the Range," August 16; Barbara Stanwyck joined her favorite actor, Robert Taylor, at Santa Barbara over the weekend. Edith Gwynn sold $300 worth of tickets for Rita Rathbone's war charity in one evening.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 28.

The Hal Roach set for "Road Show" made me feel young all over again. It's a traveling carnival, full-sized merry-go-round, shooting gallery, a set-up of milk bottles to knock down with baseballs, and a thousand and one side shows that still entrance me. And the first person I spied on the set was a little Indian, standing about 5 feet 2, George E. Stone, the most comical Redskin you ever saw. A diminutive brave who is continually trying to be friendly to Princess Yo-Yo in the carnival—and she is none other than gravel-voiced Patsy Kelly. Funny thing about George. He was runner-up for an Academy Award with one of the best sympathetic performances I've ever seen as the little Hebrew tailor in "Cimarron"—but the part "killed" him. For eight years he was typed—and it's only this year that he's come back. Georgie said, "I have only one line in this picture—but it's the greatest line I ever heard. I——"

HOPPER

But he didn't have time to finish. Patsy waddled over in the darndest dressing gown, heavy wool, faded blue print with flowers, tied around her with a piece of rope, and said, "Hi, pal, this is what they're going to wear next season. Have you heard about Georgie and me? Hottest romance in town." And to prove it, they started rubbing noses together, saying, "This is the way the Redskins do it."

And I'm not kidding—they spill 20 laughs per minute on that set—and what a spirit of camaraderie! Hal Roach believes in the family feeling. Most of his family is on his pay roll. His assistant is Hal, jr., and daughter, Margaret, plays the carnival charmer.

I sat down for a quiet talk with Adolphe Menjou, who plays a wacky guy who runs around most of the picture in striped pajamas and a tremendous Mexican hat, and the only thing he'd converse about was his stamp collection. Boy, did I hear about stamps! Adolphe says there are over 8,000,000 stamp collectors in this country, and stamps are better than money, so he says, because no matter what happens to the medium of exchange, collectors are always around to pay high prices for rare specimens. He told me about Walter Hind, Eastern millionaire, who went to the famous Ferrari auction in Paris and paid $34,000 for a two-penny British Guiana stamp—the only one in captivity.

Then just as God's gift to the Redskins, Georgie Stone minced up to say, "I didn't finish telling you about that marvelous line ——" Roach yelled, "Let's have a little quiet here!" And we all tiptoed over to watch them shoot Patsy and Carole Landis lying in bed, in their carnival trailer home. Before the cameras started rolling, Adolphe whispered, "Did you know that there is a stamp collection in the British Museum worth $3,500,000?" I shook my head, "No," and he rattled on, "And that the United States Government didn't make its own stamps till 1894? And the entire history of our country is depicted on its postage stamps?"

No, I didn't know any of those things but they couldn't snook til Adolphe quit talking, and I was getting jittery. Adolphe is funny that way. He gets so excited talking about stamps that he forgets what's going on.

John Hubbard, dressed in Menjou's kind of pajamas, (I understand both of them are supposed to have escaped from an insane asylum) leaned over and said, "What a shame the picture business interferes with philately!" (Stamp collecting to you!)

Heat Sends Social Set Scurrying From Town

All Who Can Find the Slightest Excuse Are Off to the Sea Shore, Mountains Or Any Place Else That Offers Relief

By Elizabeth Henney

A small and unobtrusive item in the paper within the last day or so told of a thermometer that hung in the sun on a store front in a little suburb of Washington. A few days of Washington's recent weather were too much for the temperature recorder. It shot up to the top of the register and exploded with a loud pop.

Most Washingtonians have felt lately a great sympathy for the little thermometer, and that one more degree of heat or one more ounce of pressure would cause them, too, to wind up in a loud explosion. With that state of mind, is it any wonder that all those who can find any excuse at all, business or social, have forsaken this city for mountain or sea breezes? As a result, all the popular watering places have visitor lists sounding like pages from the Washington Social Register.

The Berkshires have drawn some of the cream of the crop of society folk in the last few days, for in addition to the delightfully cool weather, they are offering a special symphony treat. The famous and fashionable Berkshire Symphonic Festival, at Lenox, Mass., will begin on Tuesday evening and continue for three week-ends at the Tanglewood Music Shed. It will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Dr. Serge Koussevitzky.

Norman H. Davis, president of the Red Cross, and Mrs. Davis already have reserved boxes for the event, as have Mr. and Mrs. James Lawson Karriak, of Washington. It is expected that Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, will also attend.

Others Seek Relief At Hot Springs

In another direction, also seeking cooler weather, have fled other capitalites. Hot Springs, Va., is for the moment the vacationing spot of Lieut. and Mme. Guy dal Piaz, of the French Embassy. On Friday they entertained at a mint julep party at the Warecrest to welcome some of the new Washingtonian arrivals.

Mrs. John W. Meehan, wife of Col. Meehan of the Medical Corps of the U. S. Army, and her young son, Richard Donnelly Meehan, also are stopping in Hot Springs at The Homestead.

Col. Meehan and his daughter, Miss Ruth L. Meehan, are now en route by motor to the colonel's former home in York, Nebr. The Meehans recently arrived in Washington from Panama, where the colonel was on duty at the Gorgas Hospital. They will reassemble the family here in town on August 15, when they will move into their new home at 3333 Stephenson place, Chevy Chase.

The Justice Millers Prefer Far West

Justice Justin Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals, and Mrs. Miller have gone to the far West for their cooling breezes. They have closed their apartment at Wardman Park and are visiting in Los Angeles.

Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson, who also live at Wardman, have gone with their two sons for a vacation to Ashland, Ky., and will remain there until the school term opens in September.

Cape May, Too, Has Its Devotees

Cape May, N. J., and its invigorating sea breezes have drawn many a Capitalite. Among those at the Admiral Hotel there now are Mrs. Franklin Nevius, Mrs. R. C. Marshall, jr., Mrs. James Totten, Miss Sarah D. Moore and Dr. and Mrs. John S. Brooks.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee P. Warren, whose home here is on Massachusetts avenue, are spending a few days in New York and are stopping at the Ritz-Carlton there.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles S. Kilburn, who have been motoring through Virginia, stopped off last week with Gen. and Mrs. John L. Hines at the Hines' summer home, Rocky Gap.

Sylvan Theater Hostesses Listed

A group of five young women representing the Troupers of East Washington Community Center will act as hostesses tomorrow night when the English classic by Oliver Goldsmith, "The Vicar of Wakefield," is presented at the National Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument Grounds, as the sixth weekly festival of the present season.

Miss Betty Smallman, Miss Alma Leman, Miss Margaret Rogers, Miss Suzanne Stiffler and Miss Lee Barnes will be the hostesses. Among special guests of the occasion will be Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. Stull, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Overholzer, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, Evan Tucker and Miss Frieda Egbert, as well as a number of officials of the District of Columbia government who make a practice of being "among those present," these hot summer evenings, at the delightfully cool festival performances at the base of the Washington Monument.

The Summer Festival Committee announces that in case of inclement weather tomorrow performance will be given on Thursday.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

NEWS COMES from Havana that the former Margot Garrett, daughter of George Garrett, of Washington, will come to Washington for a few days at the close of the Pan American Conference. With her will be her husband, Mariano Zuberbuhler, who was for several years attached to the Argentine Embassy in Washington. On leaving the Capital, Margot and Mariano will go to Maine to visit Margot's father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett.

Senora de Zuberbuhler's mother is Mrs. George Gordon, wife of the United States Minister to The Hague. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gordon are well known in Washington. Mrs. Gordon is now en route to Lisbon by auto caravan from Berne. Upon her arrival in Lisbon, she will take the Clipper for the United States and will be met by the Zuberbuhlers in New York.

A friend who is in Havana for the conference writes:

"The family of Jose de Lasa, of the Cuban Embassy in Washington, has been most kind to me, both in its direct and collateral branches. Last night Senor and Senora Enrique Sandoval—she is Jose's cousin, the former Maria de la Torriento, and has many friends in Washington from the days when her father was Cuban Ambassador to the United States—asked me to dinner at the home of her parents. The former Ambassador and Cuban secretary of state was indisposed and didn't come down, so I hadn't the pleasure of meeting him.

"HOWEVER, the Sandovals had about 30 very attractive English-speaking young Cubans to dinner and we had an extremely pleasant evening. Cocktails were served on a great balcony overlooking the Atlantic, with Morro Castle in view just to the right.

"The house of my hosts is an oldish one, built about the turn of the century. It stands on the Malecon, which is a broad, sweeping avenue at the edge of the sea, and certainly one of the most beautiful avenues in the world.

"After dinner we returned to the balcony and played bridge while we watched Morro Castle light flash its warning to the ships that plied up and down below our vantage point.

"A YOUNG COUPLE who were guests at the dinner drove me back to my hotel at the end of the evening, and on the way we discussed the Lions' Club convention, which has been in full swing in Havana.

"The wife turned to me and asked, 'These Lions—is it a religious organization?'

"Her husband knew that one. Without waiting for an American opinion on the subject he answered, 'Oh, no, my dear, quite the contrary.'

"I was shown, on the way home, a bust of Ramon de Mendoza, father of Roberto de Mendoza, First Secretary at the Cuban Embassy in Washington. The Mendozas live on Ramon Mendoza street, so you see Havana has a familiar aspect for me already."

TO COME A LITTLE closer home, there is a young lady at Rehoboth who is looking for Hitler. She is the 3-year-old daughter of the Winslow Van Devanters, of Washington, and the most enchanting little creature, with soft blue eyes and curls of pure gold.

The other day Robert Hinckley, brother of Mrs. McCeney Werlich, of Washington, was completely dashed to have this ravishing bit of femininity walk up to him just as he was emerging from a wave and ask, rather accusingly, "Are you Hitler?"

Mr. Hinckley, swallowing a large gulp of salt water in his haste to deny the accusation, said that he certainly was not Hitler, and what ever gave her such an idea?

THE ANSWER WAS that she had been told that Hitler was across the ocean. This didn't see so far away to her, in fact not far enough, and she has been looking fr him with a gleam in her eye ever since.

James C. Stout was best man and the ushers were Leo Stoutsenberger, brother of the bridegroom, and Richard St. Claire Green, jr.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. Pink larkspur and daisies centered the refreshments table. Mrs. Harriss was in cornflower blue lace with a natural colored hat and a corsage of roses, and the bridegroom's mother wore orchid lace with a white hat.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. John Jarvis, of Harper's Ferry, grandmother of Mr. Stoutsenberger; Dr. Fred Gemaldi, of Summit, N. J., and Mrs. Thomas Rockwell, James Fisher, and Mrs. Helen Williams, of Frederick, Md.

Mr. Stoutsenberger attended George Washington University.

Man Wonders if His Fiancee Should Forgive Him For Lying to Her for Two Years About His Market Losses; If Granted Mercy, He'll Never Lie Again

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man, 24 years old. Three years ago, I became engaged to marry the girl I love. I was doing very well, financially, at that time; and a little later, I ventured into business for myself. The venture prospered, but still I wasn't satisfied. I thought I could "get rich quick" by playing the stock market—which I proceeded to do. Whereupon I lost all my money and was plunged head over heels in debt.

Instead of telling my sweetheart the truth, I told her lies. I also lied to her family. I lied to them continuously for two years, hoping that I would come out on top, eventually—and that they could be spared any knowledge of my troubles. I loved the girl so much that I didn't want her to know and worry—because she is a perfect angel.

Recently, these lies caught up with me, so I made a clean breast of affairs. I admitted everything. And by hard work, I have settled all my debts, with the exception of one sum still owing my sister. I am now established in a nice business and making a comfortable income, but this girl doesn't know whether or not to forgive my deceit—even though I love her so much that I would die for her.

I know if I hadn't got in with a wrong crowd and lost all my money, I never would have lied to her as I did. I had never lied before. Do you think I am deserving of being put on probation for a few months—so that, given another chance, I can prove that fundamentally I am worthy of her trust? This I know—never again will I ever lie about anything. I believe she could be persuaded to put me on probation, but her father seems to be against it.

I am sure I could make her happy, because I worship the ground she walks on; and as I have already said—if she gives me another chance, I will be truthful with her as long as I live. Let me repeat the question I want you to answer: Should she, or shouldn't she, give me one more chance to prove myself?

Please answer at once, because your answer may be the means of saving the situation; of restoring my girl to me—if she sees your answer soon. Yours truly,

BROKEN HEARTED.

Lying Is Sympomatic Of Unstable Character

DEAR BROKEN HEARTED: In trying to decide whether or not to repose trust in a given individual, one's intuition must serve as guide. It is the most dependable, because the most nearly infallible, judge. This, I think, is what I might have told your sweetheart, had she asked me whether to give you another chance to "prove yourself."

After reading your letter through several times, in a spirit of (what I believe to be) sincerely sympathetic attention to the nuances and implications of your predicament—I am reluctantly though strongly constrained to share the girl's father's doubts concerning your essential trustworthiness. I feel that this is a case in which, "When the devil was sick, the devil a saint would be. But when the devil was well, the devil a saint was he."

Your passionate dedication (of the moment) to honesty of statement, henceforth and forever more, is not so indicative of stern virtue of character, indelibly acquired in the crucible of suffering, as it is indicative of that very mercurial quality of expediency which prompted you to lie about your reverses for two years continuously. In brief, the willingness to follow any course or any star or serve whatever god seems most likely to yield you the plums you seek.

Let me explain that I do believe you are intensely sincere in proclaiming your intention never again to lie to this girl about anything. It is axiomatic that the burnt child dreads the fire. You are threatened with heavy penalty for being caught in a lie; and it is rational, natural and inevitable that you would wish to avoid a comparable mistake, inviting a comparable penalty, in future.

But the significant aspect of your story has to do with the fact that you did fall down so badly in the first really crucial, man-sized test of the quality of your character. The ability to be instantaneously truthful (regardless of the anticipated consequences)—indeed, the intrinsic inability to be evasive or deceitful—is the very archstone of moral worth: of courage, strength, honor, uprightness, fidelity and general spiritual and social integrity.

There are, I think, two main classifications of liars—those without courage. You belong, obviously, in the latter classification; which is to say that you are a coward. And the form-of-expression your cowardice took suggests that you are a psychologically infantile person. You lied to "save your face," and "face-saving" (in one form or another) is the principal occupation of the immature person.

What is "getting-rich-quick" but a form of face-saving? The mature personality, who has a real and sturdy sense of inner sufficiency, feels no such need to spectacularly assert himself to or before the world, or to barricade himself (supposedly) behind his money bags against its fancifully exaggerated terrors. When his chosen vocation prospers moderately, yielding him a comfortable return, he is healthily content with that; and feels no sense of envy or personal deprecation when surveying the heavy responsibilities and redundant opulence of the more zealously acquisitive so-called "captains of industry."

But to return to the point I would make about your lapse into falsehoods, as a face-saving device cravenly employed in a period of prolonged strain—this suggests a weakness, an immaturity of character that might, and likely would, reveal itself in other forms (even though never again in the guise of a deliberately phrased lie) in some comparable emergency in the future. And this being so, I can (as I have already said) understand why the girl's father would be loathe to entrust his daughter's life into your keeping.

However, as I remarked in the beginning, it is not for me nor for the girl's father to say "yea" or "nay" as to whether she should give you another chance. That is a decision she must make for herself. And if she should grant you the chance you so prayerfully seek, don't be content with being merely "truthful" in all your statements hereafter.

Set yourself, rather, the task of growing up, in mind and spirit, to the point where, in your maturity of being and understanding, you will not be afraid either of making or of admitting mistakes. As has been said: "Any man may make a mistake; but only a fool won't learn from experience." Had you realized this truth at the time the stock market wrecked you, you could have taken the licking more like a man, by declaring the moral of the lesson to your intimates, and by showing in your subsequent conduct that the message had sunk in. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post's Woman's Page.

Today's Health Talk

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Camp Life Good for Children Provided Proper Health Measures Are Insured

It is often remembered that the modern habit of sending boys and girls to camp in large groups would probably not have been feasible or advisable 50 years ago. The object of camp life is primarily health. Modern sanitation and preventive medicine have made such gatherings really safe from the health viewpoint.

The greatest single danger that has been eliminated is typhoid fever. The experience of American troops in camp concentrations during the Spanish-American War with the frightful incidence of typhoid followed by the experience of the British army in the Boar War in preventing it by individual inoculation showed the way to safety from this ancient curse, and that was only 40 years ago. Every child that goes to camp should have a preventive typhoid inoculation. It's true it often spoils several days of vacation with a slight fever or sore arm, but it can be done long before camp starts. The same may be said of diphtheria prevention.

The nature of the water supply will be investigated by any experienced camp director. If the camp secures its water supply from a city or village reservoir that is subject to frequent inspection, all well and good.

Milk supply must also be investigated. Most of the diseases of children in the summer 40 years ago were from milk. It sounds fine to say a camp has its own dairy herd, but unless this is carefully inspected it is a source of danger. Milk should never be delivered to camp in bulk—in cans. Nothing larger than quart bottles.

The more separation of campers' sleeping quarters the better. When soldiers were herded in large barracks, during the World War, contagious diseases broke out. When they were put in smaller sleeping quarters or tents this was reduced.

The preliminary physical examination to see whether the camper is fit for all the strenuous activities of camp is also a protection.

One of the great benefits of camp life is to correct capricious appetites. The emphasis on vegetables, milk, fruits and the elimination of an overabundance of sweet makes for the building of strong, hard bodies and the loss of softness.

Another good effect of camp in many cases is to get the child away from its dependent home atmosphere and put it on its own. Those possessive parents who spend their vacation near the camp so they can "see how the child is getting along," are spoiling the good effect of camping as much as those who bootleg candy and cake to their darlings.

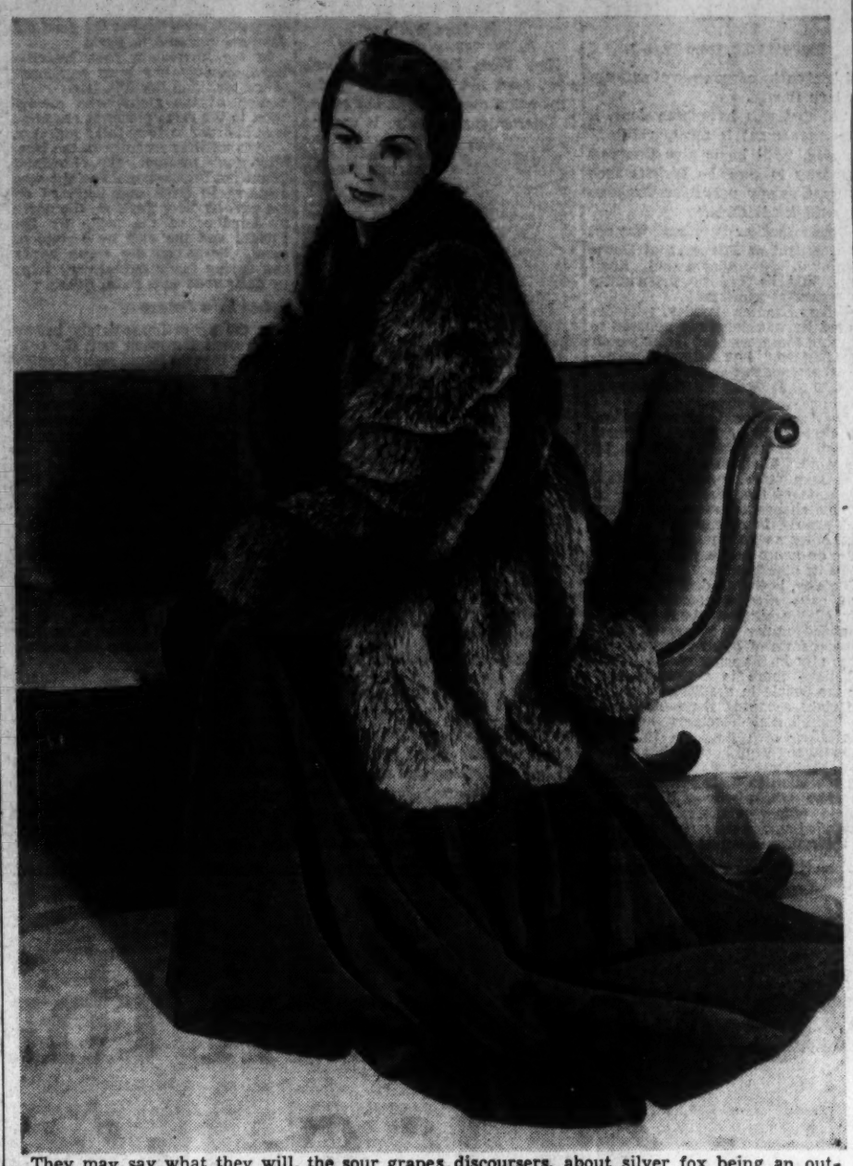
The Glamour Fur—Silver Fox



They may say what they will, the sour grapes discoursers, about silver fox being an outmoded fur, but it still holds the world's record for flattery. The softness, variety of silver and black coloring, and the genteel flattery of fine silver foxes will continue this fall to appeal to women who love beautiful things. The finger-tip-length wrap shown is appropriate for afternoon or evening and is at its smartest when worn with all black. The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Foolish Virgin

THERE'S no use trying to live another day without an all-cotton dress, you decide. Everything you own sticks to you so that you resemble a recently dunked convert at a river "baptizin'."

You should have known better anyway than to have gotten those spun rayons, Bemberg sheers and "pure" silks early in the season. But then—well you were always thinking that perhaps some of your fine New York friends would step in on you. And of course you didn't want to be caught looking like a small town belle.

However, there's no use to fool yourself any longer. This is a tropical city. You might just as well accept facts and get into a flowered voile and a Maud Muller hat as soon as possible.

You rush downtown and into the "Cotton Shop" of your favorite store. It is strangely quiet and empty. Several saleswomen are sitting in chairs. One advances. You state your demands. "What we have left are on that rack over there," she says, pointing languidly.

You assail the rack feverishly. Heavy plaid ginghams in bright red, yellow and green plaids . . . thick striped materials (could somebody's window have been robbed of an awning?) . . . a few anemic voiles and dimities—nothing you could wear outside of your kitchen.

You hurry to a smaller dress shop. It is full of racks of dresses of enchanting color and design. Ah, here at last is your El Dorado! Why, if you find just the right thing you may even wear it home—looking all fresh and crisp . . . and have everyone exclaiming "How cool you look!"

You reach out eagerly to feel the dresses . . . Silk! . . . You stop a saleswoman. "Havn't you any cottons?" "Over there on that rack by the wall," she replies motioning indefinitely . . . Again it is the same story. Again you retreat.

At the next store you inquire definitely for "thin voiles." A saleswoman points to some racks above which are signs "Sizes 44 to 52."

"No 14's or 16's?" you ask breathlessly . . . "We have some little imported voiles in the better dresses," she says "from $16.95 up." No, that won't do either with the buying of a winter coat just around the corner.

You thread your way through the misses' section of a higher priced dress store. On every side women are trying on tight black dresses. The air echoes with "side drape," "long bodice," "pencil silhouette."

Oh yes, this store is having a wonderful sale of "little cottons" a saleswoman tells you. . . She brings out a pale blue and white dotted Swiss with fetching ruffles and bows. Very nice—if your cared to buy a whole new set of summer accessories.

"Now this," says the saleswoman, holding up a little striped awning number, "is a very smart model." Yes, for an air cooled movie, you agree. She brings out her remaining seersuckers. If only you were the type to impersonate a zebra! But your aren't.

Footsore, you complete the round of stores. Everywhere it is the same refrain. "Here is what we have left" . . . "Yes, all the remaining voiles are in the larger sizes" . . . "Well, of course, everything is so picked over" . . . "You really ought to buy your cottons in January." . . .

Well, you decide, you might as well go home . . . soak your feet . . . come downtown tomorrow and . . . perhaps . . . start looking around for a little black crepe.

Summer Luncheon Plate With Eye Appeal

A HOT-WEATHER luncheon plate that is both good looking and flavorsome uses cornucopia sandwiches filled with pimiento cheese and jeweled with tiny sprigs of parsley, a colorful mixed vegetable salad in crisp lettuce cup as an accompaniment, and added to this meaty, well-chilled ripe olives as a tempting garnish of distinctive contrast.

To make the sandwiches, select square sandwich loaves of unsliced bread. Remove all crusts and cut in thin slices. Brush with melted butter and fill the rolled cornucopia with pimiento cheese blended with mayonnaise to easy spreading consistency. Filling is done with a pastry gun, even one of the paper cone variety, or with a spoon. Serve ripe olives, thoroughly chilled. Chilling in the can is simple, with overnight forethought, or place the unopened can in refrigerator for two or three hours. The olives will come out crisp and chewy.

I a dessert is desired, a frozen nectar cream of delightfully refreshing fruit flavor will be greeted with enthusiasm. It is simple to make. The recipe follows:

Frozen Nectar Cream

Combine 3 cups whole-fruit nectar. Apricot, peach nectarine, pear, plum or peach nectar are all splendid varieties. Stir to blend. Pour into refrigerator tray, place in freezing unit and freeze to a mush. Remove from unit and beat the frozen mixture into 1 cup cream that has been whipped until thick but not stiff.

Return to unit and freeze, stirring 2 or 3 times. Serves 4 to 6.

Texas Girls Lead U. S. for Beauty, Expert Opines

The most beautiful girls in America come from the South and Texas in particular holds a high record for feminine pulchritude, according to John E. Powers, who heads a famous model agency in New York City.

Powers' choice of Texas came as a result of the question "Which section and, State produces the most beautiful, typically American girls," put to him by George D. Tyson, executive director of the "Miss American Beauty Pageant" held annually in Atlantic City.

Well balanced features, a well-proportioned figure, correct posture, graceful bearing, personality, poise and health are the chief beauty requisites as seen by Mr. Powers. His conception of the perfect figure are these: Height, 5 feet 8½ inches; weight, 116 pounds; oust, 34 inches; waists, 24 inches; hips, not over 34 inches; wrists, 6 inches; ankles, 8 inches.

Among the beauty hints revealed by Powers are these:

Don't change the color of your hair; use cosmetics sparingly and skillfully. "It is far better," said Powers, "to be wholesome and unaffected rather than sytheticaly glamourized."

Motherhood Needn't Spoil Svelte Figure

Proper Exercise, Under Doctor's Care, Can Preserve It

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S just human nature to try to place the the blame for the loss of anything on something as far beyond one's control as possible. The woman with a fine family and not much figure is always qualifying her praise of a streamlined friend with: "Of course, she has never had any children!"

But how account for Joan Bennett, Joan Blondell and Norma Shearer, with two children apiece! For Mrs. Bing Crosby, with five—including twins! And for the svelte Mrs. Joseph Kennedy, with nine! Every one of these women has an exceptionally lovely figure. It would not be exaggerating to call them streamlined.

The truth is that while it is easy to lose your figure at this time, it is not necessary. The reason so many women do is that they neglect to take specific exercise following the baby's arrival—and some of them never take enough exercise to count from that time on!

Nature Needs Help

Nature doesn't take care of toning and shortening stretched muscles without your cooperation. The amount of exercise required for you to get back into shape depends on how good you were about exercising before you started to have a baby. If your muscles were in good tone, it's easy. If they were flabby, you have a hard—but by no means impossible—task ahead.

Mild exercise can be started surprisingly early. The first may be taken the day after the baby's arrival. . . . Lie on your back and raise your head from the bed several times. Just that—but it's ercise! On the second day you can do a bit of arm exercise. Hold the arms straight up in front, chest-level, then swing them down on the bed at the sides, shoulder-level. On the third day, stretch the arms back overhead on the bed, then lower down at sides. Also, on the second and third days, you can roll over and lie on the abdomen for as long as 30 minutes. Place a pillow under the chest to protect the breasts.

Even though these exercises seem very mild, you must be careful not to overdo—don't do them at all unless you have your doctor's permission! Such exercises are only suggested for normal cases. If the doctor says they are all right for you, they may be repeated from two to six times, depending on your strength.

With your doctor's approval, exercise may be slightly increased toward the end of the second week of confinement. Flex the knees, feet on bed, and draw up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. At the same time, raise the arms overhead. Hold, release. Relax between each exercise and make the movements slow and easy.

Vigorous Ones Later

By the beginning of the third week you may be equal to fairly active exercise. From the knee-flexed position, draw alternate knees up toward the chest until the thigh rests on the abdomen. Perform slowly and do not repeat more than six to eight times.

From this position, hold the knees together, feet slightly off bed. Separate knees as widely as comfortable, then bring together again. Do not repeat more than six times.

Still lying on back, stretch legs down, heels together. Bend left knee out to the side, resting the leg on bed, place the foot on the right leg and draw it up along the bed until it is close to the right knee. Then slide the foot back down. Continue for three counts, each leg.

By the fourth week you will probably be ready for the exercise leaflet, "After the Baby Arrives," for which you may send.

But even though your family is all grown up, it is not too late to recondition stretched abdominal muscles. Send for the special set, "Streamline the Midsection," designed to meet your needs.

A WOMAN'S
WASHINGTON

Evelyn Cannon, Only Woman Chief Clerk Of B. & O., Has Quite a Job at Station Here

ANYONE who thinks Washington revolves solely around the Government office buildings should pay a call on Evelyn Cannon, chief clerk of the Baltimore & Ohio freight station on K street. Lots of people don't even know there is a railroad in Georgetown; still more are not aware of the large amount of materials Washington imports for its industrial plants.

Miss Cannon, only feminine chief clerk in the Eastern district of the B. & O., has worked at the station since 1925. Her father, now retired, was Georgetown freight agent for many years; hence her enthusiasm for railroading. She handles cash collections and keeps books on lumber shipments from the Pacific Coast, wheat from the Middle West, paper from Canada and such building materials as steel, stone, cement and slate. The depot handles about 40 carloads a day; monthly freight charges total well over $100,000.

Because Washington is not a manufacturing city, she explains, relatively little is sent out to other points. Finished products shipped from here range from file cards to flour; by-products include tallow used in making soap and waste paper, presumably from the Government's trash barrels.

WINDOW SHOPPING—One good thing has come from the fad for open-toed shoes. It's created a new job: prettying up the model feet which display the shoes in show windows. On a good day at Beck's, you can count as many as 150 pairs of fake feet, all with bright red toenails. That's 300 feet, 1,500 toenails—not a bad day's work for a pedicurist in these times.

The current wave of returning diplomats has washed in a batch of interesting tales. One is told by an attache's wife who was visiting Moscow for the first time. She had her hair done soon after her arrival, and asked the hairdresser to write out his name for her so she could go back to him the next time.

When she returned to the shop the following week, the man not only failed to recognize her but refused to do her hair. She was bewildered as well as irritated by his peculiar behavior. Later a friend, more familiar with the ways of Russia, enlightened her. Obviously, according to the friend, the OGPU had gone through her possessions, discovered a mysterious paper bearing the hairdresser's name and was "investigating" him as a possible traitor.

A visitor to The Post's library spent considerable time going through back issues for the last three months searching for a picture of Margaret Sullavan. She seemed so upset by her lack of success that the librarian on duty inquired why she was in such urgent need of the picture. "My daughter wants to have her hair cut the way Margaret Sullavan wears hers," she replied.

Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker for the Washington Council of Church Women, shares an apartment with Marguerite Griffin, of the National Geographic. The former has a good-sized bulldog named Bambino; the latter's pet is a small black-and-tan, Peggy. Until recently, rainy days would find Peggy and Bambino out walking together—with Peggy walking underneath her friend, well protected from the wet. But now Peggy has grown up and no longer fits under Bambino. Probably the only case on record of outgrowing an umbrella.

Back Yard Cooking Fun in Summer

For all their gay throngs, it seems that the country clubs and resorts have to rock along without the patronage of any very sizable percentage of American families. For most of us have our summer fun—guess where?—right in our own backyards.

The important equipment is a place to cook outdoors. Page father, and put him to work building an open air stove, and the chances are that he'll assume a lot of responsibility for the outdoor cooking, too.

Congress Urged to Pass Agencies' Bill

Women Lawyers Back Measure for Review Of U. S. Regulations

The National Association of Women Lawyers urged Congress yesterday to enact the Logan-Walter bill, providing court review for rules and regulations issued by Federal administrative agencies.

In a statement, Miss Adele I. Springer, chairman of the association's committee on administrative law, contended that platform pledges of both major parties should assure passage of the legislation.

Failure to approve the bill, she said, would be inconsistent with the Democratic Party's assertion that it "rededicates itself to faith in democracy." The Republican platform pledged enactment of "legislation standardizing and simplifying quasijudicial and administrative agencies."

The bill was passed by the House, 282 to 97, but Miss Springer contends that "it has been blocked from coming up for a vote in the Senate by Senators Barkley and Minton," the majority leader and assistant leader. She said that unless the measure is passed at this session it "will be taken to the crossroads of the country as a major issue of the political campaign."

Opponents of the measure have contended that it would hamstring the work of the Federal agencies.

Conflicts in the policies of railroads, highways, airways, waterways, and pipe lines "weigh heavily on some carriers, bring an unduly heavy charge to taxpayers for aid to others, cause excessive rates and duplicate of services and hold back needed improvements in the transportation system," the survey declared. A "national point of view" was requested to bring about equitable development of the country's transportation facilities.

Three remedies for the conservation of the energy resources—coal, petroleum, natural gas, and water power—of the country were suggested: greater efficiency in the production of mineral fuels; greater economy in the use of fuels; and placement of a larger share of the energy burden on lower-grade fuels and water power.

"Recent studies indicate beyond argument that the Nation's energy resources should be safeguarded, and that a sound national policy must be concerned with their conservation and prudent utilization," was the board's conclusion.

Solutions suggested to the farm problem were:

Enable farmers to move off land that will not support their families, putting the land to grazing or forestry usages.

Make productive land available through drainage irrigation.

Improve farming methods through use of conservation methods, better seed, livestock, machinery, etc.

Supplement farm income by off-the-farm employment, public and private.

"Recreational facilities have not kept pace with the demand created by the expansion of leisure and the modern attitude toward recreation," the study stated. Regulation of commercial facilities in the light of community interest, and providing the public with facilities that will both satisfy and benefit citizens, were urged.

It was pointed out that preservation of wildlife as a major national resource is increasingly important, and that in addition to present areas approximately 17,000,000 acres of marsh and water areas are required for migratory wildfowl, and 21,000,000 additional acres for upland game and birds.

Coordination of research activities within the Government to avoid unnecessary confusion and expense was requested by the board.

A third of the population, those with incomes under $750 a year, is receiving inadequate or no medical service, the study revealed. It is estimated that to relieve this condition would cost a total amount of $850,000,000 to Federal, State and local governments.

"Those who study the problem balance the country's annual loss of approximately 10 billion dollars a year because of illness and premature death against $850,000,000 and believe the latter sum a wise investment," said the report.

Stabilization of enrollment in secondary schools and colleges is forecast in the future as the result of a falling off in the birth rate. There is a prospect of a continuation of increases in enrollments for several years in the immediate future, it was asserted.

Other resources covered in the survey included communication, water, invention, libraries and museums, and public works.

Fake Talent Scout Slayer Dies Today

Raiford, Fla., July 28 (AP).—Herbert Goddard, fake movie talent scout who tomorrow will die for slaying a high school girl, "will be glad" to see his death day dawn, he told his executioner today.

"I have already suffered enough and I will be glad to see tomorrow come," Sheriff W. H. Lawrence, of Palm Beach County, said Goddard told him after the death warrant was read to the condemned man in the death cell.

Goddard attacked and slew pretty Frances Ruth Dunn, a Miami high school girl, near Palm Beach last fall after he had lured her and another girl from their home city with promises of movie screen tests. The other girl was released and reported the abduction.

District as the proponents of suffrage believe it will.

"At that will have been done, if the amendment is finally ratified," he said, "will be to give Congress authority to give the District such suffrage as any particular Congress may think advisable."

House Speaker Bankhead was not as confident as Michener of House approval. He pointed out, however, that he had no opportunity to "canvass" sentiment.

Unless Senator Barkley, who declared he was definitely opposed to "having Congress take its hands off the District," but believed in national representation for the Capital, Bankhead declared for some form of local self-government.

As for national representation, Bankhead said he wanted to "hear all the evidence before I make up my mind." He added:

"I have felt for some time that residents of the District should be given a chance to govern themselves and should be permitted to elect local officers who would act for Congress on many matters that now require its attention."

Barkley, however, declared:

"I have always considered the city of Washington about as well managed under the present commission form of government as any large city in the country. . . . But I believe there is a good chance for the people in the District to get the right accorded them of voting in Presidential elections and to elect their own advocate in Congress who would probably give more intimate and concentrated consideration to their special needs than the whole body of House and Senate where members' attention is divided among the many concerns of their own districts and States."

War Drives International Society to Exquisite Havens in U. S.

By Inez Robb,
By International News Service

New York, July 28.—Don't look now, dear, but that bundle of elegant ennui over there in the corner is International Society. It used to spend its time on the Riviera at this season of the year, but now you can find part of it in the best guest rooms and hotel suites all up and down the fashionable seaboard. Intentionals of the East-ciety, once centered in Paris, has moved to America and seems intent on building a new nest. Apparently there will be established on these shores that international and cosmopolitan throng immortalized in the immediate past by Noel Coward, Michael Arlen, the mo'm pictures and indignant snorts from the Archbishop of Canterbury.

INEZ ROBB

This mass migration of our betters, brought on by the war, is already beginning to change New York from a great metrpolis, which it has been for many years, into a great cosmopolis, which it has never been before.

New York Is Capital

Even the Duke of Windsor, newly appointed Governor General of the Bahamas, will soon be within easy reach of his confreres. So it is not impossible that he and his wife will reconstruct this group and give it life and vitality on this side of the Atlantic. Of course, Nassau would be but a week-end way station, as New York City is undoubtedly to be the capital of International Society until such time as the good old days are restored in Paris.

In the immediate past, International Society has been composed of the rich and the idle from every section of the globe who always went to the same places at the same time in order to do nothing together.

Even until as recently as the Nazi blitzkrieg through the Lowland Countries, International Society was centered in Paris and bounded on the west by New York, on the north by London, on the south by the Riviera and the east by a state of mind. Some of the more hardy and daring made exploratory trips to Hollywood and Palm Beach.

Dukes in a Deluge

In the years immediately before the present European war, the cold weather months found many British duchesses, French gallants and miscellaneous titled citizenry from abroad in south Florida. Similarly in late spring and early summer, America's playboys, her hordes of best-dressed women and her assorted rich—and restless—filled the Ritz Restaurant in London and the Ritz Bar in Paris until the natives knew better than to ask for a table unless accompanied by one of the visiting firemen.

Now not only the expatriated have come back to their native land, but these United States are being deluged with dukes, both grand and arch; daughters of a thousand earls, all belted; viscounts by the gross, and barons and baronesses by the dozen.

Once more the White Russians, a really pathetic group which has been seeking safety from country to country for almost a quarter of a century, are on the move toward America.

Rothschilds Already Here

Members of the Rothschild clan are already in America. The Baron and Baronesse Alphonse came over from France with their family and $1,000,000 in jewels.

When the Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, the former Kitty Spottswood, of Virginia, arrives here, then the International Society inner circle will be almost complete. The dashing Kitty rushed home last year and regained her American citizenship. She is now said to be in Lisbon, with the baron, awaiting transportation to the States.

Because of an understandable pioneer prejudice against titles, on the part of the founding fathers, it has never been necessary in the past to print an American edition of the Almanac de Gotha. But the printers of this catalogue of major, minor and middlin' European nobility will be overlooking a good thing this season if they don't dash off a directory of the titled nabobs on these shores.

International Society is here. It may be a new stand, honey, but it aims to do business as usual.

Senate Report Charges Rail Deal 'Pressure'

Van Sweringens Hit On Acquisition Of Missouri Pacific

By the Associated Press

A committee reported to the Senate yesterday that the Alleghany Corporation, holding company for the Van Swerigen railroad system, had used "high pressure" methods in 1930 to obtain consent of the Missouri Public Service Commission to its purchase of control of the Missouri Pacific Railway.

The report, by an Interstate Commerce subcommittee, said the holding company had:

Brought about publication of favorable editorials through "direct and indirect persuasion of newspaper editors."

"Forestalled" opposition to the purchase from mayors of Kansas City and St. Louis, and from the Kansas City Board of Trade and the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

Established personal contact with the attorney general of Missouri and with members of the public service commission.

The report also said that Senator Michael Kinney, chairman of the Missouri State Senate Committee on Municipal and Private Corporations, was paid $1,000 "for some unexplained services in the matter."

And, it added, when a representative of Cape Girardeau, Mo., "appeared at the hearings before the commission to oppose Alleghany's petition, a Missouri Pacific official 'took care of him in some way.'"

In a statement accompanying the report, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, chairman of the committee, said:

"This report is a case study of how a holding company can mold public opinion, secure the cooperation of city and State officials and in other ways influence State public service commissions authorized and entrusted by State law with the duty of regulating corporate matters in the public interest.

"The report shows that Alleghany Corporation, . . . operated from Cleveland, hundreds of miles away, was able to secure the consent of the Missouri public service commission to its acquisition of control of some 12,000 miles of southwestern railroads, constituting the Missouri Pacific System."

The "pressure" campaign, he added, was begun after "actual control" of the road had been "secretly acquired through stock market operations in advance of any Missouri commission approval."

The report concluded that Alleghany's activities had indicated the "difficulty, if not the impossibility of State regulation of holding companies," and indicated the need for Federal regulation.

Have you seen this Chart at Gulf Stations?

IT SHOWS THE TREMENDOUS IMPROVEMENT IN GULF GASOLINES!

THIS CHART, we hope, will give you a better picture than could a thousand words of the recent amazing improvement in Gulf gasolines. It is based on a scientific test of gasoline quality today—a test that is used by many of our competitors, as well as by ourselves. The chart shows the fair comparative measure of step-up in both GOOD GULF and GULF NO-NOX . . . a step-up which is no intangible "engineering triumph" but one which may be enjoyed by you . . . in your car!

Good Gulf is now boosted to its all-time high . . . will perform in your motor second to no regular-priced fuel. Gulf No-Nox is now (as always) truly superior to all regular motor fuels. It is, even more than formerly, knockproof under all normal driving conditions. NO REGULAR GASOLINE—NOT ONE—CAN COMPARE WITH GULF NO-NOX!

Takoma Park Church Plans ParishForum

Dr. Carruthers Tells Of Program to Foster Group Discussions Of Current Affairs

Declaring that public issues should be discussed within the walls, but not under the sponsorship, of churches, Dr. John F. B. Carruthers, of Pasadena, Calif., and Washington, last night presented such a plan in the launching of the National Open Parish Forum at the Takoma Park Christian Church.

The plan which he said would safeguard the pulpit morning hour for worship, and use Sunday evenings for educational interests, was successfully tried at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church in 1938, with Dr. Carruthers as chairman.

"Such public questions as war, conscription, defense, the Willkie-Roosevelt third-term issue, taxation—not excepting District suffrage, should be discussed within the walls, but not under the official auspices of churches," said he. "They should be under the chairmanship of ministers, who would preside, but not speak from the floor of the church or parish house."

Points to Witherspoon

Dr. Carruthers said there would have been no American Revolution and no Constitution of the United States if a minister such as John Witherspoon, Presbyterian, had hesitated to turn his church and Princeton University, of which he was president, into discussion forums for the defense of America's right to rebel and establish democracy.

"Most of the 264,000 churches of all faiths in the United States are afraid and totally unprepared to become centers of nonpartisan discussion, information and impartiality in these unusual days of hate and crises," said the speaker, member of the Americanism committee of Pasadena's American Legion Post.

"Ministers stand futilely aside and allow universities no longer religious in main purpose, government and business, Army, Navy and Congress to decide and interpret the basically spiritual policies of the future of the United States in a time of incredible material stress and strain involving the destiny of youth, adults, children and country."

Dollar-a-Year Basis

Dr. Carruthers, at present not actively affiliated with any congregation, explained that the National Open Parish proposes to rent the church on Sunday nights from the trustees on a dollar-a-year basis.

Forums will be held under the impartial chairmanship of a minister willing to organize such a speech assembly in a church, on the understanding that no resolutions, straw votes, polls or other measures of any kind be undertaken, he said.

"The National Open Parish assumes all responsibility, legal and and educationally, and thus the church simply becomes what the Jewish synagogue was in pre-Christian days—a religious forum of broad enlightenment and inspiration."

The Rev. Ernest Bryant, pastor of the church, is chairman of the National Council of Adult Civic Education and is connected with the Public Health Division of the Social Security Administration.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, the former Ambassador to Rumania, William Culbertson; the late William A. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany, and other officials addressed the open parish in 1938.

Dr. Kavanaugh To Oppose Lloyd In Arlington Vote

Leo Lloyd, member of the Arlington County board, will be opposed for renomination by Dr. Minor J. Kavanaugh, in the Democratic primary August 6.

The names of Representative Howard W. Smith and Senator Harry Flood Byrd will not appear on the ballot, since they are unopposed.

Polls will open at sunrise, 5:13 a. m., and close at sunset, 7:14 p. m. Persons who have paid their poll taxes may register up to and including the day of the primary.

Any voter who will be out of the county August 6 may register not less than five days before the primary and vote an absentee ballot.

Russell Assails Substitutes For Religion

Catholic University Professor Speaks To Evidence Guild

Christ can strengthen men against the "present vogue of horrible substitutes for religion, Dr. William H. Russell said at yesterday's Catholic Evidence Guild meeting in Franklin Park.

"For those who speak of the decay of religion there should be some bitter food for thought in the taste which they are forced to take of the substitute offered for religion," said the guild vice moderator and Catholic University School of religion professor.

"Large numbers in America are becoming panicky over the notions imported from other countries," he said. "Religious ideas, as well as political nostrums, are making their way around the world. Among those ideas, we may note, as it exists in one country, is the tendency to exalt a man into a God for the intellectuals as well as for the masses to worship."

Speaking on the same program, Marcellus Scheuer said:

"Not least among the reasons for present-day cynicism toward religion has been the fact that men for over a century have been continually worshiping their own ideas about God rather than God Himself.

"God is not a God of capitalism, nor a God of monarchies, nor a God of socialism, but because God is justice itself. He champions what is just in capitalism, just in monarchy and just in socialism," he declared.

Postlude

By Rav C. B. Brown.

Rudolph Ganz conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday night at the Potomac Watergate. Program: Marche Heroique (Saint-Saens), Fingal's Cave Ovrture (Mendelssohn), Symphony No. 88 in G major (Haydn), The Fountains of Rome (Respighi), The Ocean (Hadley), Shchelkunchik Ballet Suite (Chaikovski), Rakoczi March (Berlioz), Suite of Swiss Folk Songs and Dances (Binet).

When Rudolph Ganz announced that he would conduct some "watery" music at his appearance this summer as guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra at the Potomac Watergate in defiance of the ill wind that had blown rain upon his audience several times before, the words had the sound of jest. But there was enough earnestness in them to bring about for him last evening the satisfaction of a successful boast. Threatening clouds decreased the attendance, and yet no drop fell to spoil the pleasure of those who had taken the risk of a downpour.

BROWN

For the program he presented he should have received three cheers—one for each of the novelties with which he enlivened the concert. One was an old stranger, the "Marche Heroique" of Camille Saint-Saens, which was written 64 years ago, and is seldom heard these days. It is a stirring and brilliant composition that adheres to the traditional march form, but offers the listener much more besides rhythmic insistence. The instrumentation is full of color and the melodies are treated with the skill that turns possible monotony into actual variety.

The second unfamiliar piece was Henry K. Hadley's tone-poem, "The Ocean," which dates from 1916 when the composer was living in San Francisco. Inspiration was not Hadley's strong point, but his aptitude for making the most of his ideas was pronounced. He knew how to dress up a conventional subject in rich colors that gave it glamor. "The Ocean" illustrates his expertness in this kind of transformation, for the idea of the tone-poem is Byronic, and it is in the treatment of the idea that the interest lies. Its description of the moods of the sea is vivid, thanks to skilled instrumental devices and sound harmonic writing.

Last of the novelties was a suite of Swiss folk songs and dances by Jean Binet, a native of Geneva, who studied with Ernest Bloch and learned much from him in the way of harmonic spice.

Mr. Ganz also avoided what one may call the routine of summer concerts by selecting Respighi's "Fountain of Rome," which he read with brilliance and a contagious zest. This is a score which asks much from the technique of the players, and the orchestra met the demand with a fine responsiveness.

The remainder of the program brought to the auditors music that that they knew well from many repetitions: Mendelssohn's poetic "Fingal's Cave" overture, Haydn's G major symphony which is catalogued No. 88, Chaikovski's "Nutcracker" suite, and the "Rakoczi March" that Berloiz wrote for a concert he conducted in Budapest in 1846, and later incorporated in his dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust."

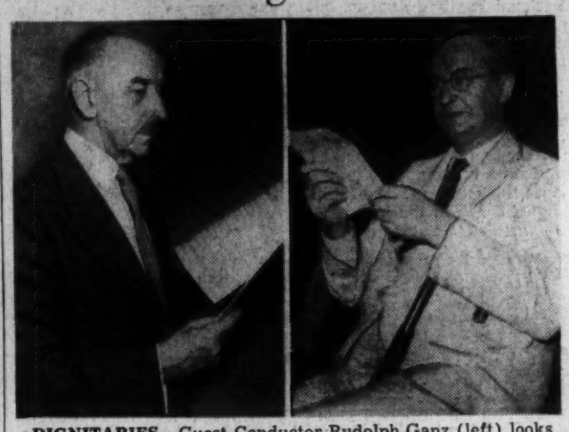
The Rains Didn't Come

Ganz's Reign as 'Rainmaker' Ends at Watergate Concert



DIGNITARIES—Guest Conductor Rudolph Ganz (left) looks over the score and Lord Lothian (right), British Ambassador, looks over the program

By Lucia Giddens

Rudolph Ganz last night happily lived down his previous prowess as a "rainmaker."

As guest conductor at the Watergate concert of the National Symphony Orchestra, Ganz defied the weather with several watery pieces—"The Ocean," "The Fountains of Rome" and the overture to "Fingal's Cave"—but he did not stir the clouds in competition.

Making his fifth appearance at the Watergate, he recalled that his concert, one season, had to be postponed because of rain. And another summer the crowd waited under umbrellas for the eventually clearing skies.

But last night, backstage, after the third and final encore for the undampened lingering listeners, Ganz declared: "I now claim the title of unsuccessful rainmaker."

Weather-wary crowds stayed away. But a slight rainfall before the concert merely served to cool the atmosphere, and did not make another threat. A crowd estimated at 3,100 luxuriated in the coolest evening in many days.

However as late as the intermission Ganz cocked a tentative eye at the skies and, announcing a rearrangement of the program, said the orchestra would play a Swiss suite last "if you are still there."

Ganz, in shirt sleeves and with the military bearing from his long-ago service in the Swiss army, led the orchestra through a tuneful international program. French, German, Russian, American and Swiss composers were among those included.

The conductor, Swiss born, has been in this country 40 years—so he knows what American audiences like, and he gave it to them last night. Such favorites Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite and, for encores, two Brahms Hungarian dances brought torrents of applause for a man who'd expected other kinds of torrents.

After Ganz had led the orchestra through what he called "the final encore," the players themselves cheered him, in unison with the audience's applause.

As the conductor sipped ice water, a few minutes later, he praised the expertness and sincerity of the orchestra. He'd had two rehearsals with it—Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning.

"But it was so hot at the morning rehearsal, we did very little except just meet, but consider how well they played tonight. And some of the music was new to them," he said enthusiastically.

So the unsuccessful rainmaker had nothing to blame even on the heat.

OFFICIAL SOCIETY—In the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt and daughter, Louise

Hints on Avoiding Spotted Fever

Although a serum for Rocky Mountain spotted fever is now available from the United States Public Health Service, a careful daily examination is still the best means of preventing the disease, caused by the bite of the common dog tick, according to Dr. W. Lewis Schafer, Alexandria city health officer. In warning picnickers and others visiting wooded and grassy areas to exercise caution, Dr. Schafer said early removal of any ticks which may become attached to the body is a virtual guarantee of safety.

If a tick is removed within eight hours of the time it has started to feed, the health office declared, there is virtually no chance of contracting the disease. When the tick is removed, the wound caused by its bite should be swabbed with alcohol or iodine.

The serum has been proved effective only against the milder strains of the disease, Dr. Schafer said, but he described it as "helpful," particularly to those persons who frequently visit areas where the tick is most prevalent.

D. C. to Fight On for Arms Schools

If Comptroller Rules Adversely Congress Aid Will Be Asked

Steps to save the District's national defense training project, even in the event of an adverse ruling from the Comptroller General's office, were in view yesterday, with possibility of a joint resolution in Congresss.

"If we get an adverse ruling, we will probably go ahead with the program until Congress has time to act," L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools, said yesterday. The present law does not mention the District of Columbia specifically.

"The United States Office of Education has indicated that it will aid in seeking passage of a joint resolution by Congress authorizing the District to participate," he said.

Meanwhile classes for approximately 600 enrollees in five public schools, which began last Monday, will continue at least until Friday of this week. The Board of Education at a meeting Saturday voted to discontinue them temporarily on that date if snags are not removed. Action, however, is expected before then.

The Office of Education Wednesday asked the Comptroller General's office for an opinion, but it had not been received when the District Board of Education met Saturday. So the Board authorized a letter from its president, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, to Acting Comptroller General R. N. Elliott to make further explanation of the situation. The opinion is expected soon.

Congress recently authorized the $15,000,000 vocational training program for national defense, with the funds to be allotted "to States, subdivisions thereof or other public authorities." The question is whether the District is included in that wording.

With approximately $18,000 in view from the Office of Education, the local board set up a plan for a six weeks' course, manned by 27 teachers, for training of 600 men from WPA and District Employment Center rolls.

Mrs. Doyle yesterday praised the teachers who agreed to continue the work, for the time being, after they were told of the uncertainty of their pay status.

Consumers To Nominate In Greenbelt

Four New Directors Are to Be Elected By Cooperative

Nominations for four new directors of Greenbelt Consumer Services, Inc., will be accepted until Thursday, it was announced yesterday.

An election will be held at the group's quarterly meeting Wednesday, August 7. The directors will serve for one year.

The organization's original plan of electing five directors in January and four in August will thus be carried out for the first time. This was facilitated by voluntary resignations as directors of Mrs. Carnie Harper, Joseph P. Loftus, Mrs. Bertha Maryn and Earl J. Swailes.

Wallace F. Mabee, assistant community manager, announced yesterday the second town fair would be held September 5-7. The town council has appropriated $350 for the fair, including $100 for prizes, for the best yards and gardens.

Summer meetings of the Federation of Republican Women of Maryland will be held Mondays at Rugby Hall, near Annapolis, Md., it was announced yesterday.

Presiding will be Mrs. William H. Chase, of Riverdale. Judge Linwood Clark will speak on the seven amendments and five referenda before the voters at the coming general election.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, July 28.—Ever hear of Hugh Ray? Neither did we. But when he talks, the best football minds in the country listen, and attentively. We caught them in the act today in the Cleveland Hotel, where the coaches, owners and referees of the National Professional Football League were spell bound for four hours as a little bald-headed man told them about football.

POVICH

They were here for the annual mid-summer meeting of the National Football League, but they were here primarily to listen to what 160-pound nude-pated Hugh Ray chose to tell them. A most amazing citizen is this Mr. Ray.

Today he had the toughest audience that anybody who pretends to talk football could ever encounter, as they listened, enrapt. Open mouthed sat Curly Lambeau, coach of the Green Bay Packers, world's best football team; Steve Owen, coach of the New York Giants; Jock Sutherland, late of Pitt and every other big league professional coach in the land save Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, who was in far away Spokane.

There, too, were men like Dutch Clark, called the greatest football player who ever lived, and he was enthralled. As was Tim Mara, owner of the New York Giants, and Art Rooney, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who without blinking an eye three years ago bet $80,000 on a horse at Saratoga with Mara booking the bet. A strange character is Mara, who on the day he stood to lose $35,000 on one horse race, would tuck his $5 straw hat underneath his coat if it looked like rain at Saratoga.

Out front on the rostrum, Hugh Ray expounded about football and the best football minds in the country listened, as we were saying. Because little Mr. Ray, a diminutive Irishman once removed from the Ould Sod, was telling them about the football rules, and because Mr. Ray is the man who knows more about football rules than anybody in the United States.

Out front on the rostrum, little Mr. Ray told the coaches of the best teams in the world where they would have to head in in designing their plays. "That kind of a play is against de rules," Mr. Ray would say in his tough-talking manner. He ught to know, because he's the man who makes the rules and then edits them for the National Professional League.

This year the professional league gave Ray a five-year contract to act as assistant to the President. Interpreting the rules is his job. Seemingly they have faith in the 56-year-old man, else they wouldn't sign him for five years. And well they might, because Ray, it seems, is a walking encyclopedia of football rules. He's been studying 'em, writing 'em, editing 'em, clarifying 'em and interpreting 'em for 30 years now.

He knows by heart every rule in the book. The involvements don't stump him. He can quote word-for-word everything under the heading, for example, of rule 4, section 3, article 1, item 4, and then give you the supplementary notes as faithfully as if he were reading 'em out of the rule book which he did, indeed, write.

The league has turned over all of its 40 officials to Mr. Ray for examination, grading and acceptance. In his infinite wisdom, he talks to them as if he were talking to a group of grammar school boys. Red Frizzell, Bill Holloran, Ed Cochrane, Bobbie Kahn, the greatest football officials in the land, listen to him reverently when he points out the precise moment during the course of a play when team A no longer is the offensive team but becomes the defensive team and thus is susceptible to whatever penalties may be in the book.

Who is this guy?

Well, he was the quarterback at Illinois in 1905 when Walter Eckersall was running wild for Chicago. He was the 100-yard dash champion of the Big Ten 35 years ago and the man he beat for the title was no less than the late Mr. Eckersall, who was supposed to be the fastest article in spiked shoes.

Hugh Ray didn't last long in college football. He was a 132-pounder, which is one reason. Today the fingers of his hands are so broken and crooked that he can't pull the trigger on a gun, and he still wears a harness on the back he injured in college football. He turned from playing to coaching.

Down at Smith's Academy, in St. Louis, he turned out an unbeaten football team, comprised of 11 millionaires' sons. In the line was Adolph Busch, jr., of the brewing family. His center was young Mr. Bixby, who later was to back Col. Lindbergh's flight to Paris in the Spirit of St. Louis. Twenty years later, at Harrison Tech, in Chicago, he turned out a pair of right fair football players in Andy Pilney and Andy Puplis, who made their marks at Notre Dame.

He's a wizened little old man of 56 now, and to hear football people tell it, he's the owner of the finest football mind in the land, honest.

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 28.—In these days when most fights seem to be ending with one of the gents sitting in his corner, either ignoring the bell or simulating a vast exhaustion which magically disappears as soon as he reaches the privacy of the undressing room, it is encouraging to note that the militant torch has been picked up and is being carried on in other quarters.

CONSIDINE

The gals have taken over. The pioneer woman that is a part of all fighters' wives is asserting itself. Mrs. Steve Dudas steps in to threaten Steve's manager, Joe Gould, with major lacerations if Joe dares to instruct Steve to lay down to up-and-coming Pat Comiskey. Mrs. Lew Jenkins, the dynamic Katie, takes charge of Lew on the eve of his Armstrong fight, then takes charge of his dough and carries it off to Texas to start building Katie Jenkins' Drive-in Hamburger palaces. Madame Dudas comes through again by refusing to let Steve fight for charity, when the Dudas Board is bare. And now Mrs. Max Baer has called off a reshooting of what—in 1935—was a $1,000,000 fight.

Mrs. Baer is behind the evaporation of the September meeting of her husband and Joe Louis, a match which Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and San Francisco would have been willing to present. Of course Mrs. Baer probably had to plead all of nine seconds with Max to break down Max's stubborn determination to fight Louis again. But without her sharp counsel, Max probably would have gone through with the match, taken as much of a beating as he thought the "gate" warranted, and surrendered. Max is convinced that Joe Louis is the greatest fighter that ever lived.

The withdrawal of Baer probably will result in a much-needed temporary retirement for Louis. Mike Jacobs has announced that Louis will meet the winner of the Bob Pastor-Billy Conn fight. That's debatable. If Pastor wins, which isn't too difficult to imagine, Mike will find it impossible to steam up a third Louis-Pastor fight, even though Robert was knocked out only once in 21 rounds of fighting with the champ. If Conn wins we doubt if the public will accept him as anything but a frail prey of Louis—for if Conn wins we imagine it will be by a decision and not by the overpowering knockout route which would make him popularly acceptable. We have an idea that Louis will go into cold storage—and that he won't fight before a good house until late next summer, by which time Comiskey or Conn might become reputable challengers.

Jacobs gruffly tries to cover up Baer's chronic dislike for a return match with Louis. When his publicity staff asked him what reasons they could give for the cancellation of the match, Jacobs growled, "Tell 'em there's a dozen reasons." On the Coast, Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, further softened the shotless capitulation by giving out a story that "nobody wants to fight Baer," and said that the percentage Jacobs offered Max to fight the champ had been too small. Max, and everybody else, is well rid of the match. Baer probably will go to South America this winter to fight Arturo Godoy. They're dickering now. Max won't get hurt and it could mean $30,000 to him.

Paul Derringer, who perhaps can throw a baseball more accurately than any man in the world, says that any pitcher who deliberately tries to bean a batter could do so nine times out of ten.

"I tried to hit a fellow only once," Paul told a friend recently. "We were playing the Cubs and Hartnett was 'on' me pretty bad. Gab kept it up and finally he came to bat and called me that four-word thing. Down where I come from in Kentucky you just don't call a man that. So I stopped pitching and said, 'I wouldn't say that again if I were you, Gab.' But Gab said it again. So I took up position, wound up and hit him in the neck. No sense hitting him in the head. Anyway, Gab didn't say those words any more."

The futility of trying to beat the races is borne out brilliantly by a message from the New York State Racing Commission, on the subject of winning favorites. The commission announces with considerable pride that a fine mark was set during the Aqueduct meeting when 42.06 per cent of the favorites won their races. The average for all New York tracks to date is 39.01 per cent, and New York tracks usually have a higher rating in this respect than any other tracks in the country.

In brief, the acknowledged best horse in the field, the animal whose past performances, breeding, current form and condition made it foolhardy to bet against, failed 60 per cent of the time to justify the faith of experienced selectors and bettors. By betting on the accepted surethings, and hitting this fabulous streak of winners, a person would have lost 10 per cent of his bankroll over the racing span. And that, the commission says, is an enviable state of affairs.

Nats Rout Cleveland, 9-1, After Losing, 6-3

Sid Hudson Gives 6 Hits In Winning

Walter Masterson, Krakauskas and Carrasquel Slugged To Start Twin Bill

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, July 28.—The Nats and the Indians labored for five hours this hot afternoon and brought forth a split double-header. The early successes belonged to the Indians who slapped the Nats down, 6 to 3. Then along came Sid Hudson and Washington won the finale, 9 to 1.

Hudson distinguished himself in that latter engagement. Even the hostile 19,489 customers in Cleveland's big Municipal Stadium were constrained to applaud the loose-jointed Washington rookie for his second-game heroics. He held the Indians to six hits.

The two ball clubs Jekyll-Hyded it in the twin bill. In the opener the Indians plastered Walter Masterson, Alex Carrasquel and Joe Krakauskas for 15 hits, while Al Milnar was throttling the Nats with seven. In that second game, with Hudson baffling the Indians, the Nats cuffed five Cleveland pitchers for 15 hits.

Second Lefty Belted

Following the success of Milner, Manager Vitt sent the equally left-handed Al Smith to the mound in the second game, but he didn't last out the first inning. Mel Harder, Joe Dobson, Johnny Humphreys and Bill Zuber felt the wrath of the Nats' attack led by Buddy Myer, who delivered an important triple and double.

Hudson turned the Indians back scoreless in the first inning despite the fact that his opening pitch was a double to Ben Chapman, and the Indians didn't get another hit until the fourth. They didn't get their lone run until the sixth, when Chapman again doubled and scored on an infield hit by Trosky. In the last three innings, the only Cleveland hit was Mack's single with two out in the ninth.

Sudden Awakening

Jimmy Bloodworth was operating at first base for the Nats in the second game in an experimental measure by Bucky Harris and he made a strong bid for the regular job with his defensive play. He grabbed a hot smash off Boudreau's bat in the first inning and cut loose a superb throw to the plate to nip Chapman who was trying to score, an otherwise he played a clever game at the bag.

There was nothing feeble about the Nats in that second game. George Case doubled to center on the first pitch, and on the next Lewis singled to right to score him. Welaj followed with a single to right and two outs later Myer dumped a triple into left to score the third run of the inning. Harder relieved Smith at this point.

They belted Harder out of there in the fifth. The first four men to face him hit. Welaj beat out a high bounder to Keltner, Travis doubled to left, Bloodworth bunted and beat it out, and Myer doubled to left to score the second run of the inning. When the Indians walked Evans purposely to fill the bases, Hudson himself, bagged a single to left that drove in two more runs and set the Nats up in a 7-0 lead.

After that, it was just a breeze for the Rossville (Ga.) lad, who

Nats Open Series With St. Louis Tomorrow Night

Cleveland, July 28.—The Nats today entrained for St. Louis, but they will not take the field again until Tuesday night, when they open a two-game series with the Browns with an arc-light contest.

Dutch Leonard will try to beat the Browns with his knuckle ball in the night game.

Manager Bucky Harris indicated today that he would alternate Sammy West and Jimmy Bloodworth at first base for the Nats following Bloodworth's clever performance at the position today.

Bloodworth is the fourth man to play the bag for the Nats this season, following Jimmy Wasdell, Zeke Bonura and West in that order.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

To Myer, 5 points, because he tripled to drive in two runs in the first inning of the second game, and because he drove in a third-inning run with a triple.

To George Case, 4 points, because he made three hits in the twin bill, stole a base and played a brilliant game in the field.

To Cecil Travis, 4 points, because he made three hits, including two doubles.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, 4 points, because he made two hits, including a double, and played a clever game at first base.

To Johnny Welaj, 3 points, because he made two hits in the second game.

Perpetrators of Yanks' First-Game Homer Barrage

Some Critics Claim Tourney Rates on Par With National Amateur

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 28.—Grown in its 19 years to a robust and proud affair, the National Public Links Golf Tournament clamors now for recognition as the peer of the National Amateur, if not its superior.

Critics who have claimed that the Publinx rates on a par with the National Amateur pointed today to the remarks of the new champion, Robert Clark, of St. Paul, as testimony for their stand. During the week-long show here Clark and his rivals trounced par day in and day out.

"I honestly think," Clark said, "that the field in general for the public links is a faster and better balanced field than you find in the National Amateur."

The new titlist spoke thus while he was still in the dog fight for the crown. He won it yesterday by smothering Michael Dietz, of Detroit, 8 and 6, in the finals at Rackham Municipal Course.

There was further evidence—for example, the fact that Charley Lind, of Denver, played 91 holes in two under par during the fierce pace and failed to survive the third round. He lost in that round to Clark, one up in 19 holes.

"In the National Amateur," Clark said, "you'll find about two dozen outstanding players who have the wherewithal, to make the trips to the tournament. There are other good players but they can't afford the trip.

"Now with us fellows it's different. We're sponsored by our home district public links associations and in that way more outstanding players get a chance to play and make the entire field faster than the national amateur."

The St. Paulite, who doubles as a salesman of hardware and medical supplies, won his first publinx in a strong show of concentration at the task Saturday. Once he got his short game under control in the middle of the first round of the 36-hole final, he never gave Dietz a chance.

Yanks, Chisox Split Before 39,537 Fans

Champions Win Opener, 10-9, on Six-Homer Attack, Paced by Keller's Three Long Hits; Chicago Takes Nightcap Behind Thornton Lee

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 28.—The New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox split two games before 39,537 spectators today, the world champions pounding out a 10-to-9 victory in the opener with six home runs and then succumbing to southpaw Thornton Lee's five-hit pitching in the nightcap, 8 to 4.

Despite their murderous attack in the first game, the Yanks barely lasted against the battling Sox, who trail the fourth-place New Yorkers by only a game. Ted Lyons was the losing pitcher.

Joe DiMaggio started the home run parade with two men aboard in the third inning after the Yanks had scored one run in the second. Charley Keller followed Dimag with the first of his three circuit blows. Keller got his second in the seventh with one man on base and Babe Dahlgren also connected in the eighth. In the ninth with the score 8 to 7, DiMaggio blasted his second homer and Keller again followed suit. The Sox rallied vainly in the ninth, producing two runs before the side retired. Keller and DiMaggio now have 20 homers apiece.

Lee gave the Yanks only five hits in the second game, but two were triples and two were doubles, enabling the New Yorkers to stay in the running until the Sox scored their second cluster of four runs in

Gustine, Pirate's Rookie, Injured

Boston, July 28 (AP).—Frank Gustine, outstanding rookie second baseman of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was injured today in a collision with Rightfielder Elliott as they chased a foul hit by Sibby Sisti in the eighth inning of their first game with the Boston Bees.

Manager Frank Frisch said Gustine, who was severely shaken up in the crash, would be kept out of action in the nightcap.

Veteran Right-hander Dropped Outright 3d Time This Season

By the Associated Press

New York, July 28.—For the third time this season Pitcher Willis Hudlin was given his outright release today—this time by the New York Giants.

The husky righthander spent 14 up-and-down years with the Cleveland Indians from 1926, when he finished high school, until this spring, when twilight fell on his major league career.

As a ten-year man he could not be sent back to the minors, and he was made a free agent when Cleveland had to cut its squad in May. He signed with the Washington Nationals, reportedly with an agreement that he would be kept the entire season, but a few weeks later he was turned loose again and the Giants took him on.

He made one start, a losing one, against Cincinnati last Sunday, and Manager Bill Terry's decision to release him was announced after today's game with the Chicago Cubs.

Hudlin's record for the season is two victories and one defeat for Cleveland, one victory and two losses for Washington, and one defeat for New York.

6,000 Expected to See Stadium Bouts Tonight

Joe Louis, one and only Brown Bomber of the fighting game, steps into the ring at Griffith Stadium tonight. But only in the role of referee.

The world's heavyweight champion will be here for two reasons. One toto watch his welterweight protege, Holman Williams, of Detroit, fight Wild Bill McDowell, of Dallas, Tex., in the 10-round feature match. Secondly, to handle the 6-round semiwindup between two former Golden Gloves champions—Gilbert Mayo, of Alexandria, and Vince Truminello, of Baltimore.

Between 6,000 and 8,000 boxing fans who consider Louis the present idol of fistiana, are expected to attend.

Louis says he is not going out on the limb one bit in predicting that his colored protege will be the next world's welterweight champion, and fitting successor to Henry Armstrong. He states that Williams, who came along to win Golden Gloves laurels in the Motor City just about the time the Bomber did, has everything a good champion should possess—quick thinking, two powerful mittens, a good defense and ability to weave and bob correctly.

McDowell Tough

Of course, Willie McDowell, who twice whaled the daylights out of Phil Furr, will have something to say about his ability, too. And Willie should prefer letting his fists speak with authority. McDowell, long regarded as a come-on fighter, did all right by himself when he lost to Cocoa Kid at the stadium. In fact, McDowell lost none of his supporters. His rousing tenth-round comeback, which had the Keed groggy from his machine-gun punches, was evidence that McDowell can punch.

Those who saw Furr lose to Cocoa Kid are of the opinion McDowell's stand against the No. 1 welterweight challenger was far greater.

Due to be in McDowell's corner tonight to aid his manager, Bill Duffy, and second, Johnny Lane, is Pat Comiskey, the promising Irish heavyweight fighter, who is a stablemate of McDowell. And there are those who predict he might be meeting Louis for the world's heavyweight title next year.

Has Fine Record

Williams is no new name in fistic circles. A stablemate of Louis, trained by Larry Amadee and Jack (Chappie) Blackburne, both of whom are to be in his corner tonight along with John Roxborough, Louis' co-manager, Williams has lost but six fights in 37, a record he defies any welterweight to match

Beckman Winner Of Game; Seibert, Greenberg Homer Tigers Lose ½ Game

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 28.—Pitcher Louis (Buck) Newsom's 13-game winning streak was shattered today as the Philadelphia Athletics punched across four runs in the eleventh inning to defeat the pace-setting Detroit Tigers, 9 to 5.

Babbling Bo-Bo hadn't been beaten since the opening season game, but the A's, always a jinx to the Tigers, caught up with him in that second extra-inning and belted him to the showers.

It was Newsom's first mound appearance since suffering a broken thumb July 17 in a game with the Boston Red Sox at Boston. Had he won today he would have been only two games shy of the American League record for consecutive victories.

90-Degree Heat

For all but one-third of an inning Newsom toiled in 90-degree heat that forced Johny Babich, the Philadelphia twirler, to give up after the sixth inning.

Newsom didn't have the control of previous games, however, and he, too, tired late in the game. He struck out ten, but walked seven, and more than once got himself out of a hole with his pitching heart and superb support afield.

The Athletics hit Newsom hard, scoring twice in the first on two walks, a single and an error, adding two more in the sixth on Dick Siebert's homer with one aboard, and another in the seventh on Wally Moses' double and Sam Chapman's single.

Rubeling Opens With Double

Al Rubeling opened the eleventh with a double and before it was all over, Wilson Miles walked, Bob Johnson singled, Siebert, who batted in five runs, doubled, and Frankie Hayes singled. Archie McKain then took over and the A's tallied their final run on a force play.

The Tigers got all their runs, including Hank Greenberg's nineteenth homer of the season, off Babich, scoring in the first four innings, but couldn't do anything with Relief Hurler Bill Beckman, who got credit for the victory.

The defeat was the ninth for Detroit in 16 games this season with Philadelphia and cut their margin over the second-place Cleveland Indians, who split a double bill with Washington, to one and a half starts.

7-Year-Old Boy Completes 27-Mile Marathon Swim

St. Louis, July 28 (INS).—Hailed tonight as an athletic prodigy was 7-year-old Sonny Kole, of Edwardsville, Ill., who laughed off his latest feat and looked for new waters to conquer.

The youngster last night completed a marathon swim in the Mississippi River from Alton, Ill., to St. Louis, a distance of 27 miles. His time was 8 hours and 15 minutes.

Sonny was trailed by his father, Stephen A. Kole, in a motorboat.

Asked how he felt at the conclusion of his downstream journey, the boy laughed and replied, "Tired, but I'm okay."

Last year Sonny swam across the Hudson and the Mississippi, a distance of about a mile in each case.

Cubs Beaten, 8-4, As Curveballer Takes 8th Win of Season

By the United Press

New York, July 28.—Emerging from a three-day slump, the Giants slammed two Chicago pitchers, Jake Mooty and Vance Page, for ten hits and eight runs today to chase the Cubs, 8 to 4.

Harry Gumbert, lanky right-handed curveballer, in chalking up his eighth win, not only went the distance but paced the Giants' attack with three hits, including a triple and a homer, good for three runs.

All the Cubs' scores came as a result of round-trippers. Stan Hack drove one into the stands in the third inning with two aboard, and Bill Nicholson rapped his sixteenth of the season in the sixth.

Frank Demaree and Harry Danning also hit homers for the Giants—each coming with the bases empty.

For being selected as the most valuable player in the Southern Association last year, Babe Young was awarded a trophy and traveling bag by the Sporting News before the game.

Fay and Pelton Win Washington Event; Indian Spring Duos to Playoff for 2-Man Team Trophy; Mrs. Walper-Ferguson Victors

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Henry I. Quinn, former Congressional Club president, posted one of his best rounds yesterday to win the Greens Committee Trophy tournament with a net 65 for the 18-hole medal play handicap event. The new champion was out in 42 and back in 41 for an 83 and deducted an 18 handicap for his 65.

J. M. Strait was Class A winner with 81-10, 71, while T. E. Hughes topped the Class B scores with 79-11, 68. Class C was a two-way deadlock between T. B. Conlyn, 83-16, 67, and H. L. Frederick, 85-18, 67. A net 67 by H. W. Millang, from a gross 94 and 27 handicap won low net in Class D.

Congressional Club members will vote on a plan to be submitted by the board of governors in a general meeting tonight at 8 p. m. at the club.

INDIAN SPRING

The two-man team trophy tournament at Indian Spring found Earl Clary and Jerry Enright deadlocked with A. B. Norrod and Joe Jenkins, necessitating a play-off this week. The event was a best ball, full handicap tourney.

Clary and Enright played the nines in 32-30—62, handicap included, while Norrod and Jenkins reversed the figures with 30-32—62.

WASHINGTON

With Washington Golf and Country Club's hole-in-one barrage apparently subsided after E. J. Guthridge and Pro Dave Thomson knocked the ball in the same cup, the second, in the same week, the members stuck to a two-man team event.

Claude Rippy and Lieut. Webb won low gross with a best ball score of par 70 while low net went to E. A. J. Fay and J. P. Pelton with 77-19—58. Three teams tied with net 60's, R. E. Hotze and L. Paxton, 76-16—60; H. E. Radcliff and J. C. Bachman, 74-14—60 and H. H. Hankes and Paul Campbell, 73-13—60.

CAPITAL

Mrs. Leo Walper was again a member of the winning low gross team in a Capital Mixed Scotch Foursome tourney, the farmer District champion pairing with E. R. Ferguson, jr., and posting a 76. Low net went to Mrs. Hazel Robertson and T. P. Hayden with 89-23—66.

The tourney was a costume event with the "wacky" dress prizes going to Mrs. Wayne Smith and W. D. Welch, dressed as a doll baby and Mahatma Ghandi, respectively.

Five teams finished in the prize list with net 68's: Mary Fornear and John Phelan, 89-21—68; Wayne Smith and R. L. Burgdoff, 91-23—68; Mrs. Helen Anderson and H. E. Davies, 98-30—68; Mrs. Lillian Davies and R. C. Heinrich, 91-23—68; and Mrs. Betty Quigg and Frank Anderson, 94-26—68.

MANOR

Chester Leakin's 97-18, 79 total was the lucky number in the Manor Club blind bogey tourney, while other prize winners were D. N. Pratt, 87-7—80; H. J. Shea, 89-9—80; L. J. Manders, 89-9—80; and Carl Willingham, 70-6—73.

Ray Simms found his playing partners had to get along with on Manor's tough tenth hole, as he missed a birdie putt by inches and still lost the hole to all. W. C. McCreery, Ray Fleming and Dan Pratt holed putts from 20 to 30 feet for birdie threes.

The entry deadline was extended until tonight for the intra-club match Wednesday, when J. V. Brownell's "city slickers" meet Albert Bouic's "country gentlemen," with a dinner at stake.

BEAVER DAM

The mixed Scotch foursome tournament at Beaver Dam was postponed until next Sunday, when the entire field was caught in the afternoon downpour with the farthest out on the seventh hole.

ARMY AND NAVY

The Allan Burton 36-hole medal play trophy tournament for the Service Club women members, scheduled to start today, has been postponed until a date in September.

Middle Atlantic professionals will each donate $5 to the purse for the Assistant Professional Championship to be played at Woodmont over the 36-hole medal play route. Entries of the assistants, plus the pros' contribution, should be sent to Gene Larkin immediately.

Mrs. Walper, Cox Paired In Pro-Lady

16 Teams Entered In Event Tomorrow At Chevy Chase Club

The luck of the draw paired Congressional Professional Wiffy Cox and Capital Club Women's Champion Mrs. Leo Walper in the Pro-lady tournament tomorrow at Chevy Chase and they appear to be the team to beat. The names of the women golfers and the pros were drawn from a hat.

However, all prizes will be on a handicap basis and it is likely to be anybody's tournament. Mrs. Walter R. Stokes and Gene Larkin, Mrs. Betty Meckley and Ruth Coffey and Mrs. Ellen Harris and Lew Worsham are among other prominent teams.

Team handicaps range from the two-stroke allowance of the Stokes-Larkin and Meckley-Coffey duos to 17 for Mrs. A. A. McEntee and Allan Burton. Army and Navy pro. Coffey and Ralph Beach, of Baltimore, are the visiting mentors entered, while 14 local pros complete the 16 teams.

Local Pro-Am Duos In York, Pa., Today

A guaranteed first prize of $100 to the winning professional will attract several local pro-amateur teams to the annual tournament in York, Pa., today. Mel Shorey, who won the event with Art Cross last year, will defend his title with a new partner, Jim Hartz.

Other local teams include Al Houghton and Volney Burnett, Leo Walper and Charles Malone and Bobby Brownell and Eddie Stevens.

Anne Ross Will Appear Tonight At Airport Pool

Furnishing impetus to a meet already looked upon as one of the outstanding diving affairs in this sector, Miss Anne Ross, of New York City, announced that she will compete in tonight's A. A. U. diving meet at the Airport Pool.

Miss Ross, long considered one of the outstanding divers in the East, arrived in town last night and immediately staged a lengthy workout at the Airport Pool, declaring herself to be in excellent condition for tonight's big meet.

In entering, Miss Ross will probably rule a slight favorite over the well-balanced field. Prior to last night, Miss Patsy Palmer, of the Shoreham team, was generally looked upon as the class of the field, but Miss Ross' entry may change the picture.

The men's diving end appears to be a battle between Jimmy Russell, of Baltimore, defending champion, and Bill Tarbett, Washington's pride. Russell has defeated Tarbett for the past two seasons in this meet and the latter is especially anxious for revenge this evening.

In addition to the diving, an interesting adjunct to the evening's entertainment will be the 440-yard District free-style championships in both the men's and women's fields.

Bill Wright, of the Washington Golf and Country Club has been established a top-heavy favorite in the men's free style division. Wright already holds the District titles in the 50, 100 and 220 yard free style events. His teammate, Gordon Mustin, is expected to furnish him with his most serious competition.

That some member of the Shoreham girls' team will win the female division of the free style appeared almost a certainty, considering the large number of entrants Coach Dudley Gordon has placed in competition. No less than ten of his girls will vie for the trophies. Starting time tonight is 8 p. m.

Oliver's Great Finish Wins St. Paul Open

Pudgy New York Professional Overhauls Metz In Stretch to Win by One Stroke With 276; Metz and Goggin Tie for 2d; Little Is 3d

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, Minn., July 28.—Golf's big round man, Ed (Porky) Oliver, rolled down the home stretch with all the drive of a through-express locomotive today to capture the $7,500 St. Paul Open championship at Keller course.

Staging one of the greatest finishes in the tournament's history, the 220-pound, 23-year-old professional from Hornell, N. Y., scored a brilliant three under par 69 on his last round to just edge out the defending champion, Dick Metz, of Oak Park, Ill., and Willie Goggin, of Chicago.

Oliver's winning 72-hole total was 276, one under Metz and Goggin. Working on opening rounds of 66-71, Oliver had a third round of 70 for a 54-hole aggregate of 207 as Metz negotiated that distance in 205 strokes. Starting the final 18 holes—and playing together—each went out in 35. Then Oliver, disqualified in this year's National Open for starting too early, decided he'd waited long enough this time.

Squares Match

He won the tenth and twelfth to even accounts, and then went a stroke ahead by taking the fifteenth as Metz bogied. Metz squared the battle at the sixteenth, but Oliver rammed down a 30-foot putt for a birdie to go one stroke up as they headed for the final hole. On the par 5 eighteenth, Metz was on the edge in two, Oliver in a bunker. Metz approached to within 3 feet and Oliver, daunted not a bit, chipped inside his opponent and then matched Metz' birdie 4 to take the tourney's $1,690 first money to the roar of some 6,500 fans.

Goggins, finishing later, posted a final round 68 for his 277. At 278 was Lawson Little, national open champion, who had rounds of 69-68 today. Jim Foulis of Hinsale, Ill., with finishing rounds of 71-72, had a 279, and Sam Snead and Jimmy Hines landed in the 280 bracket, Snead having finishing rounds of 67-69 and Hines, 68-70.

Hogan Has 281

Ben Hogan, the year's leading money winner, and Tony Penna, finished with 281, with the remainder of the field fairly well strung out. In all, 23 players equaled or bettered par of 288 for the 72 hole route.

Low amateur honors went to Jim Ferrier, the big simon-pure who holds the Australian open and amateur crowds. He had final rounds of 72-75 for a 287. Walter Hagen was among those who equaled par for the distance, the old master having final rounds of 73-71.

Costello Post Loses; Title Hopes Wane

Most of its title hopes evaporated for Costello Post nine of the American Legion Junior League, yesterday when Police and Fire registered a 9-2 victory on the West Ellipse. It was the only league clash of the day, two other games being forfeited because participants had no pennant chances.

At the same time it was announced that the athletic commission of the Legion had decided to replay the game between Sergt. Jasper and Fort Stevens played on June 23. Jasper won the battle, 10-7, but a protest was filed because of interference with a runner on the base line and it was allowed. The game will be held Tuesday on the Ellipse.

A Sergt. Jasper victory will give the team second-half honors and a crack at Cooley McCullough, first-half winner, in a three-game series. If Fort Stevens wins, four teams will be knotted for the second-half title, necessitating further playoffs.

Schroeder-Kramer Win Sea Bright Title

Young Californians Upset Riggs, Van Horn With Great Rally, 7-9, 8-10, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3; Alice Marble Takes Fourth Straight Crown

By the Associated Press

Sea Bright, N. J., July 28.—Continuing a world tennis reign uninterrupted since 1937, Alice Marble swept to her fourth Sea Bright championship today a simple 6—2, 6—0 victory over Mary Hardwick, of England.

Young Ted Schroeder and Jack Kramer, of California, after being on the brink of defeat, rallied brilliantly to capture the men's doubles title from National Champion Bobby Riggs and Welby Van Horn, Los Angeles.

One-Sided Victory

The scores were 7—9, 8—10, 7—5, 6—3 6——3.

Miss Marble, the world's premiere woman player, accomplished her triumph in less than 45 minutes. Almost from the opening service she dominated the match, and the meeting was a sharp contrast to the grueling men's final yesterday when Riggs turned back Frank Kovacs, Oakland, Calif., in a 3½-hour marathon.

Queen Alice's forcing drives compelled the English miss to hurry her stroking. The loser's gameness and baseline steadiness carried many games to deuce, but Miss Marble had all the necessary finishing shots.

Schroder and Kramer, defeated a week ago at Baltimore by the Riggs-Van Horn team, were within one game of meeting another reverse today. They dropped the first two sets after leading briefly at the outset, and Bobby and his 19-year-old partner, sensing a quick victory, went all out to build up a 5-0 lead in the third.

Snap Riggs' Service

Against these odds Schroeder and Kramer dug in and won one game after another, pulling up to 5-5. On the eleventh game they snapped Riggs' service at love, and Schroeder held his delivery to win the set with a run of seven games.

In the two final sets, Schroeder, whose overhead was faulty earlier, began to match Kramer's consistent smashing and the pair lashed out with a fierce net attack that left Riggs and Van Horn ankle deep in smashes.

Riggs' game showed some effects of his tiring, 2—6, 0—7, 6—3, 11—9, 10—8 victory over Kovacs yesterday. The country's top-rated netman was given one of the severest tests of his career by the unranked Kovacs, who four times was repulsed at match point.

Browns Bow To Red Sox, 3-1 and 13-10

Boston Pounds 22 Hits In Nightcap; Doerr Homers Twice in 2d

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 28.—Fourteen pitchers were summoned to the mound today as the Boston Red Sox took measure of the St. Louis Browns in both ends of a double-header, 3 to 1 and 13 to 10.

Ten hurlers saw service in the free hitting nightcap in which the Red Sox raked six Brownie slabsmen with a 22-hit assault paced by Bobby Doerr who got two home runs and a three-bagger. Jim Tabor also homered for the victors.

Handicap Horses Have Tough Time Dethroning Challedon

Performance In Cup Race Is Praised

Eight Thirty May Be Chief Contender For 'Big Pete's' Racing Crown

By the Associated Press

New York, July 28.—Challedon may not be the king of the turf again in 1940, but one thing is certain—he isn't going to abdicate.

Whichever galloper takes the crown away from him—and there aren't many around who seem to have the makings—is going to have to do it the hard way. For, while most pretenders to the throne—the runners like Eight Thirty, He Did, Many Stings, Kayak, Fighting Fox and Isolater—have faltered along the way, "Big Pete" took his time getting ready and now is really hot.

W. L. Brann's big bay proved that yesterday in winning the Hollywood Gold Cup, while Arnold Hanger's He Did, after clicking in five straight, tired under weight at Empire City and finished out of the money.

Challedon Can Pack Weight

In showing the movie folk how it's done, Challedon answered two major questions:

1—He packed 133 pounds and packed it so well he cracked the Hollywood track record for a mile and a quarter—2:02 flat—coming from 'way back with his sizzling stretch run that's like a fire truck going down Broadway with its siren full open.

2—He has one definite requisite of a great horse—he can do his training "in a box car." He arrived at Hollywood after a trans-continental train ride with only four days to get ready, and he made it with plenty to spare.

Trainer Lou Schaefer stopped us under the elms at Belmont one day last May and said flatly, "we aren't going to take any chances with 'Pete' this year; he won't start until he's ready, and he can have all summer if he needs it."

Lost to Eight Thirty

He wasn't fooling. Many Stings stole the show at Florida last winter, and, when the action headed north, George D. Widener's Eight Thirty came along and looked like the real thing. Meantime, Challedon spent months just rambling around the farm. Then he came to the races in a two-horse test at Suffolk a couple of weeks ago, and gave Many Stings a good going over, with Jockey George Woolf holding "a handful of wraps." But apparently he wasn't quite ready for the big league campaigning even then, and a few days later he finished third to Eight Thirty in the rich Massachusetts Handicap—although he was coming like the wind.

Both Eligible at Saratoga

As matters stand, his chief opposition for the handicap championship of the year figures to come from Eighty Thirty, who has proved himself something less than the best weight-carrier in the world. They are both eligible for two stakes late in the Saratoga meeting next month—the Merchants and Citizens and the Saratoga Cup—and Challedon will have a chance then to get his revenge, if he can.

Those "in the know" are counting Kayak out of the picture. It's somewhat of an open secret around and about that all is not well with Charley Howard's fine South American bred, that he has a cracked quarter. That would eliminate him, because it's going to take a whole horse to give Big Pete the works.

Selections at Bel Air

Dear Al:

Hats off to a grand sportsman! I mean W. L. Brann, owner of Challedon. When horsemen and turf writers heard that Brann had ordered Challedon shipped to California for the $50,000 race, heads shook almost to the man. I understand Trainer Lou Schaeffer turned white when he received word to prepare Challedon for the trip. It just didn't seem to be in the books that a horse could travel the width of the Nation, get off the train, shake himself a couple of times and win such a race. But Brann, who wanted Californians to see a great horse run a great race, believed otherwise. Last Saturday, Challedon proved his contention. Besides owning and loving horses, it seems Mr. Brann also knows horses. At least, he certainly proved it in the case of Challedon. Here's another thing. I have a whole lot of respect for Tommy Daly, Frank Cronan, Joe Hernandez, Bryan Field and other fellows who operate the public address systems at race tracks. While Daly was in New York, broadcasting the big race last Saturday, I took a flier at the job here at Bel Air. Before I tried it I thought these announcers were stealing their pay. However, it is a tough job and, after sweating through an afternoon of it, I'll take writing and chart-calling. The next time I believe I hear an announcer call a wrong horse on the backstretch, I'm not going to have anything to say. To "Marlboro Benningite:" Jockey Leon Garrett is not married and the horse you have in mind did not run in any Preakness. Despite the fact that the heat wave has been on, betting at Bel Air continues to be far in advance of the best season experienced at that track. In the first four days of the meeting $556,258 has passed through the tote as compared with $466,784 for a similar period last year. Thanks to Mickey for that kind postcard. The steeplechase jockey, H. Cruz, is Harold Cruz, the Washington boy, who rode well on the flat before weight grounded him. Art Brown is going fishing this week—via Saratoga, Rockingham, Bel Air and four dog tracks. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Stadium won last out over a heavy track but showed speed on a fast oval in good company at New York. Deserves the call here. Mayfern has done about everything asked. Hasn't run a bad race in weeks. Buckle Up's last at New York was promising.

Second race—Aster Princess was poorly handled in her first Hagerstown race and then came back to stumble around a cuppy track. She has the speed and this looks like the right spot. Cautious Bo is good now and will be a keen factor. Miss Wing may benefit from that rest.

Third race—Quakerstreet turned in a nice effort benind Baffler in her first appearance over this course. A steady jumper, this one seems to have the edge in the day's steeplechase. Harem Honey was prominent when she fell last out. Scurry Along will like the company

Fourth race—Shesinit is tossed in this with feather weight. Showed me enough at Hagerstown to warrant a top pick in this company. Miss Ksar may not have liked the mud last out. Schley Al has had more than his share of hard luck.

Fifth race—Butterman has been freshened and gets a bit the best of it in a rather open race. Appears capable of handling the 116-pound assignment. Cats Crade has speed and is a threat. Colored Post surprised at Hagerstown and has worked well since.

Sixth race—Sistaur needs only a ride to defeat this crew. Recent outing in New York was a fine effort. First Fling was prominent in that last. Yankee Lad has a bit of class that should help.

Seventh race—The Swagman looks like the best bet of the day. Needs only some help from the saddle. Pencader ran out when he appeared to be headed for brackets last out. Mastake for the show end.

Eighth race — Cherry's Child downed better than these at Delaware and this looks like the right spot. A fast tract will help Bellthorn. Goodwine has been sprinting, but is capable of going this route occasionally.

Best bet—The Swagan.

Old Saratoga Starts Month's Racing Today

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 28.—Proud old Saratoga, throne room of the sport of kings, is making a play for the horse-loving peasant.

Its seventy-sixth meeting opening tomorrow is designed to attract Joe Doakes, out for a brief holiday at the races with his wife, Mable, as well as the diamond-bedecked Rajahs of the sport.

On the crest of a pari-mutuel betting wave that has engulfed State after State, the Nation's oldest race-track opens its newest 30-day season as the last to turn to this form of betting some contend is aimed at improving the breed of the $2 bettor.

It wasn't always thus. When the subject of pari-mutuels—and the cut they bring State treasuries—first came up, tradition-steeped backers of the elm-studded Spa course shouted loud opposition. Society was certain the iron-men would hold the last track in the country run solely "to improve the breed of horses."

Everyone seems resigned to it now. In the old days it required $3.85 (or a pass) to enter racing's sacred portals and watch the best horses in the Nation run for upwards of $300,000 in purse money in some of the sportiest stakes in the land. Tomorrow, it will cost $1.50 (and no passes).

The opening day card lists two famous stakes, the $5,500 flash for 2-year-olds at 5½ furlongs and the 7 furlong, $2,000 added American Legion handicap for 3-year-olds and upwards. In addition there are six overnight races, including one over the steeplechase course.

McDowell-Williams Fight Tops Card at Stadium; Joe Louis to Referee

—"and that goes for Armstrong, too," says Holman.

Williams' record includes victories over Steve Mamakos, a win and loss in bouts with Cocoa Kid. According to Trainer Amadee, Williams fights on all shows in which Louis defends his titles. Williams will be 7-5 favorite, but those who like to dabble in upsets will take McDowell.

The masterful way McDowell handled himself against Furr in two bouts is something local fans can not erase from their memory, for they know Mac has the stuff in the pinches.

Thirty-eight rounds are on the card. Oscar Wright, colored thunderbolt, meets Jackie Carter, Washington, in a six; Irish Johnny Dean takes on El Brookman, Washington, in a six, and Macie Long, of Dallas, Tex., a newcomer, takes on Eddie Camps, Allentown, Pa., in a six. Joe Price and Jimmy Green, local colored boys, open the card at 8:30.

Pirates Win, 5-2, 7-3, For 17th Victory in Last 22 Contests

By International News Service

Boston, July 28.—Riding on the crest of a victory wave, the Pittsburgh Pirates today twice dunked the Boston Bees—5 to 2 and 7 to 3—and sailed into the fifth port of the National League Derby.

At the same time, the Boston boys cruised into the National League cellar, displacing the Philadelphia Phillies who halved their twin bill with the Cincinnati Reds.

Victors in 17 of their last 22 tilts, the Buccaneers, who are but three games out of the first division, were skippered to the slot once held by the St. Louis Cardinals by Outfielder Maurice Van Robays.

In the opener, Robays clouted a three-run homer which enabled Dick Lanahan to chalk up his second win of the season.

While Max Butcher held the Bees to four hits in the nightcap, Robays doubled home a pair of runs in the second frame to give the Frischmen a lead they never relinquished.

Dodgers Regain Form, Beat Cardinals Twice

Fred Fitzsimmons Observes 39th Birthday By Winning 10th Victory, 3-0, in Opener; Wyatt Takes Nightcap, 7-4; Gives Only 3 Hits

By International News Service

New York, July 28.—The Dodgers showed some of their old-time form today as they swept both ends of a double-header with St. Louis, winning the first game, 3 to 0, and the nightcap, 7 to 4.

Fat Freddie Fitzsimmons observed his thirty-ninth birthday by chalking up his tenth victory against one defeat in the afterpiece. Time was called in the second inning of this game when the tireless veteran was struck on the arm by a batted ball. But after a brief respite, Fitzsimmons renewed his chores and set the Cards down with nine well-spaced hits.

Mort Cooper, who "beaned" Joe Medwick in a recent Dodgers-Cardinals series, was a victim of a 13-hit assault and was charged with the loss.

Behind the three-hit pitching of Whitlow Wyatt, Brooklyn scored an easy shutout triumph in the opener. The Dodgers pecked away systematically at the offerings of three pitchers, scoring one run in each the first, third and fifth frames. Fiddler Bill McGee, the first of the series of St. Louis hurlers, was the loser.

Two Kansas City Policemen Crack Three Pistol Marks

Omaha, July 28.—Officials of the Corn States Pistol Shoot reported Garfield Huddleston and Francis O'Connor, Kansas City policemen, cracked three world's records today and equalled a fourth.

They boosted the mark in the .22-caliber doubles in the Camp Perry course event from 593 to 598 and raised the .22-caliber doubles mark from 583 to 585.

Huddleston, who set a slow fire record yesterday, added the timed fire at 25 yards to his string. With a .22, he raised the record from 200 plus 10 tens to 200 plus 15 tens.

O'Connor equalled the record 199 in the .22-caliber 20 shots rapid fire at 25 yards.

Garvin's Win, 7-5

Garvins Grill softballers defeated Ryan's Tavern, 7 to 5, yesterday on diamond number 11 in a Sport Center league game. Floyd Kuhn connected for a Garvin homer.

Nats Trounce Indians, 9-1, After 6-3 Loss marked up victory No. 9 for his first season in the majors.

That first game was a pretty horrible contrast in pitching performances, with all of the honors belonging to Al Milnar, the big southpaw, who suddenly has learned how to pitch. Against the seven-hit job Milnar did on the Nats, Walter Masterson gave up seven hits in the first three innings.

The Nats gave the unappreciative Masterson a run in the first inning when Lewis walked with one out, went to third on Travis' single and scored on an error by Boudreau, who let Bloodworth's slow roller trickle through his legs. With men on second and third, Bloodworth took a third strike.

In the third inning they upped Masterson's lead to 2-0 after two were out when Sammy West tripled against the rightfield wall with Travis on base by a pass, but the rookie promptly gave four runs right back to the Indians.

Cleveland packed five hits into that fourth inning. Boudreau, Trosky and Campbell whacked out solid singles to produce one run before anybody was out, and a bit later, Hemsley singled to center with the bases full to produce two more. Milnar himself delivered the fourth run of the inning with a single to center.

Carrasquel was delegated to do the pitching in the fourth inning and in the fifth he had a horrible time of it. Four hits in a row—by Mack, Hemsley, Milnar and Chapman—knocked the Venezuelan loose from the Indians' fifth and sixth runs of the ball game.

Joe Krakauskas pitched the last three innings and no complaint can be registered against him. He allowed four hits, but no runs whatsoever.

Flood Nine Finally Beats Klein, 6 to 4

3-Run Rally in Ninth Decides Issue; Homer By Leatherwood Wins

After two setbacks this season, J. C. Flood's youthful nine finally emerged victorious from a battle with Klein Tavern yesterday as the latter bowed out of the lead in Section A of the National City Sandlot League.

The score was 6-4 favoring the Plumbers. It took a trio of runs in the ninth inning to turn the trick.

J. C. Flood thus clung to top spot in the second-half standings, along with D. G. S., which took a forfeit from Motors; Parkard Washington, which battered Marvin's Credit, 1-0, and Miller Furniture, which rang up a total of 22 hits as it trounced Orange Disc, 14-3.

Going into the final inning, Flood trailed by 4-3. Bill Liggett, of Klein, launched Flood's rally by hitting Eddie Vermillion with a pitched ball. A hot grounder by Lou Mostow through second base a moment later scored Vermillion with the tying run, leaving the crowning blow to Hal Leatherwood, slugging outfielder.

Leatherwood scored himself and Mostow with a home run into rightfield. It was one of the longest ever hit on the Ellipse and the only circuit clout of the clash.

Listen! with Glynn

Edmond Taylor, the C. B. S. correspondent who saw France fall a few weeks ago, the author of that best seller, "The Strategy of Terror," is to be heard over WJSV at 3 p. m. today, giving his version of the reasons for France's plight and his ideas on what America should do to prepare against similar faults in its democracy.

Taylor worked for C. B. S. in France all during the country's ill-fated struggle against overwhelming enemies—internal as well as external. He was so busy in fact that when his book was published the publishers had to point out that he hadn't had time to read the proofs.

The book deals with the tremendous effect propaganda had in demoralizing the French and after months, even years, of study on the propaganda technique, Taylor certainly qualifies as an expert capable of telling Americans what to believe and what not to.

In view of the pending legislation on compulsory military training for the U. S., Taylor's remarks, too, should be quite topical and informative. For he maintains that from his point of view volunteer soldiers were much more valuable in battle than conscripted men. Taylor says that members of the B. E. F., composed chiefly of professional and volunteer soldiers, showed much more fighting spirit than the French conscripts.

Defense Needs RevealHousing Shortage in Va.

Disclosures Held To Justify Governor's Insistence on Action

Richmond, Va., July 28 (AP).—E. Leigh Stevens, director for Virginia of the office of Government reports, said today the need for housing that Gov. Price saw when he rescued the housing bill at the 1938 General Assembly has been shown anew by national defense demands for homes in Tidewater Virginia and in other sections of the State.

The Governor sent a personal message to the Legislature to revive the Housing Authority Bill, which then was passed by the House, 49-42, and later approved by the Senate with minor amendments.

Local Housing authorities since have been set up under provisions of the bill at Bristol, Portsmouth, Newport News, Alexandria, Hopewell, Martinsville, South Boston and in Warren County. Norfolk County has appointed an authority to consider a $5,000,000 dwelling unit project for naval base personnel.

Richmond is expected to establish a housing authority within the next few months, under Mayor-Elect Gordon B. Ambler, who takes office September 1.

There might have been a little trouble over the bidding of today's hand, but all four players had on their "Lord and Lady Chesterfield" manners. South made four spades with rather neat play, but East and West could have saved the game by bidding five diamonds.

The bidding:

Opening lead: ◇ K.

The ace won the first diamond lead, and three rounds of spades drew the opponents' trumps. Declarer led a low club, and when West played small dummy's nine won the trick. Another club was led and this lost to West's queen. He returned a heart; North ducked, and East was in with his queen.

East could not lead back a heart and had no spades or clubs, so he had to lead a diamond which declarer ruffed. The king of clubs forced out West's ace. He desperately played another heart, but it was too late. Declarer went up with the ace, trumped the last diamond and discarded the losing jack of hearts on his good club. Now he could trump the losing heart in his hand with North's last spade.

By immediately forfeiting two club tricks, declarer insured his game contract and avoided several pitfalls.

U. S. and Canada In Futile Wait For British Plane

Boucherville, Quebec (Canadian Press), July 28.—Air officials who spent the day looking for the year's first empire Transatlantic mail plane ended their vigil in speculation tonight.

They agreed at dusk that there seemed little likelihood of the plane reaching Montreal's air harbor before tomorrow afternoon.

The flight is to mark the resumption of British Transatlantic mail services. So secret have details been kept that even the highest officials had no knowledge of the plane's takeoff or probable arrival time.

N. Y. Police Keep Vigil

New York, July 28 (AP).—A police guard and federal agents, responding to reports that a British Transatlantic palne was en route here from Foynes, Ireland, maintained an all-day vigil today at the LaGuardia field seaplane base.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

FOOLING THE WEATHERMAN. The midsummer "berling" spell hammered home the lesson that the prize way to enjoy cool evenings when its hot is to park either in outdoor or indoor night spots. The indoor places are all aircooled and the outdoor places have been located for natural coolness. On the hottest night there's a brisk breeze on the Starlight Roof. And cool air from Rock Creek Park always drifts over the Shoreham Terrace.

Fricasseed downtowners have been recovering health and spirits in the grotto-like coolness of such spots as the Neptune Room, Madrillon, Mayfair and the Harrington Tavern. Motorists find happy and breezy havens at the end of refreshing drives when they reach O'Donnell's or Club Esquire up Marlboro way, or the Nightingale, River Bend or Gay Nineties below Alexandria, or the Rustic Cabin, or Del Rio out on the Baltimore boulevard.

THE GREAT TONSIL MYSTERY! Harriet Derck, the honey-throated warbler of the Lounge Riviera, had her tonsils removed at the age of 7. Now she tells us that her doctor says her tonsils are growing back! Christopher Columbo! It can't be the heat, it must be the tonsilectomy of it all.

GOLF IN RHYTHM. Golf teams of the Starlight Roof and Rainbow Room orchestras will battle it out on the Kenwood course tomorrow. The Starlighters have just christened themselves the Wathey Wallopers in honor of Manager Dan Wathey of the Roger Smith Hotel, and promise that they'll knock that pot of gold (meaning lunch and drinks) right out of the Rainbow. And the Rainbowites are equally confident. If any of the boys does the course in less than par, we'll put his picture in the paper.

DANCERS CRACK RECORD. St. Clair and Day, stepping sleekies, begin their seventh straight week on the Shoreham Terrace this eve, thereby beating all records for a long-time dance engagement in our town.

NEPTUNE NEWS. Representative William P. Schulte, of Indiana, came in to enjoy Milt Herth and his Herthquakers. Congressman Schulte has been an admirer of Herth music since those early days when Milt was trying hard but unsuccessfully to convince impresarios that the organ was a great instrument for hot rhythm. . . . Milt is frying up a tremendous version of Ravel's "Bolero" and will serve it steaming in a couple of days. He's changed the time from three-four to four-four. Watch out!

Lee Mason, River Bend's versatile trumpeter-singer-arranger

MAYFAIR BACKGROUNDS. With all the to-do about "Mousie" Garner in Mayfair, the other bright members of his gang haven't been properly mentioned. Singer Ruth McCullough is an Eastern High girl, class of '38. Frank Flanigan's cheerful Irish mug was awfully popular at the Rainbow Room when he was bassist-singer there. And you'll remember Sammy Richardson for his fine singing and saxing at the Casino Royal. They make a high-test unit.

PAUL KAIN, most successful band leader in Glen Echo's history, is a Hollywood alumnus, having played in most of the "class" spots there and having made a series of movie shorts. He plays clarinet, flute, oboe, sax, piano and does a hot drum act. He likes to hunt, fish, "dabble" in water colors, collect Sarouk rugs, Van Gogh prints and the darnedest neckties (Charvet cravats, he calls 'em) you've ever seen. Some day he wants to start a school to give practical instruction to musicians who want to specialize in dance music.

LOTUS LOVELIES. Since the Lotus is holding over the "Parade of the Elements," you should know that half of the Elemental lasses are brunette and half are blondes. Also that one of them has the cutest freckles, that they're all very spirited and gay and their costumes are the most dazzling to be seen so far this summer.

DARLINGS DEPARTMENT. Linda Carroll, of the King Cole Room, is worried. Three previous K. C. R. singers (Helen Greene, Sandra Ward and Peggy Wood) left to get married. Linda doesn't want to get married, but she hears the footsteps of fate. . . . Eileen George, of the Anchor Room commutes to Baltimore every week-end. She's just a home girl at heart y'see, in spite of her two-octave voice. . . . Jane Harlow, the vivacious and so-popular violinist at the New Ba? varian, is one of the hardest working lasses in town. She practices violin for hours every day, says, "I've just got to practice every minute I can to keep up with these Heintze brothers." . . . Marianne Lee, tiny blonde canary at the Hi Hat, has a hard time convincing the customers that she's not a midget.

CASINO STARLETS. All of the refreshing "Hollywood Starlet Revue" will remain at the Casino Royal this week. This is really good news. The Starlets, dance better than St. Vitus and then Jivin' Jack Schaeffer steps out and shouts, "I can't dance, but I'll blow this horn!" It's fun unlimited.

CUBAN SURPRISE! Lorenzo, handsome boy singer at Maryland Club Gardens, is fresh from Cuba, warbles divinely, looks like Freddie Bartholomew, only younger. Conversing with him via interpreter, we naturally asked if he planned to attend school in Washington. The interpreter giggled, said, "Lorenzo says he hasn't time to go to school because he has a wife and baby to support." These precocious Latins!

DICK'S GRILL is like a hurricane these days. Electric fans play directly in every booth and a new giant-sized fan blows across the other breezes, almost lifting the bar-sitting customers off their seats.

Self-Help Bureau Will Celebrate

A celebration will be held at the Washington Self-Help Exchange, 2529 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, Thursday afternoon, to commemorate the third anniversary of the exchange establishment.

The program, to be participated in by some of the exchange workers, will begin about 2:30 p. m.

Four men worked at the exchange the day it was opened three years ago. Since then, a total of 3,757 have found employment in the shops. The number of shops has increased to 22. A total of 1,978 jobs have been secured for participants by the exchange, it was announced by Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, executive director.

Catholics Asked To Home-Coming

The Right Rev. Monsignor Charles R. O'Hara, rector of Holy Comforter Catholic Church, Fourteenth and East Capitol streets, has extended a special invitation to all former parishioners for home-coming ceremonies tonight.

The exercises will be held in connection with the thirtieth annual carnival now in progress on the school grounds at Fifteenth and East Capitol streets, which is drawing more than 4,000 persons nightly. It will continue through Saturday.

Novena services honoring Our Lady of the Miraculous Medal will be held in the church at 7:30 p. m. tonight. Worshipers will then proceed to the carnival.

Takoma Park Cellist On PDS Program

A talented young Takoma Park cellist, Miss Laura I. Mattoon, will be the soloist on the PDS program over Station WMAL this morning. She will be accompanied by Miss Edith Bond, also of Takoma Park, at the piano. Miss Mattoon, who is a member of Sigma Kappa sorority and teaches at the Glen Echo-Cabin John School, studied at the University of Maryland and the Eastman School of Music, before going to Cornell, where she graduated. She has studied music for seven years and has played in string ensembles and the Cornell Symphony Orchestra.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G street northwest, is presented each week-day morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

The Federal Diary

Arms Budget To Cut Other U. S. Agencies

Economy Measures Will Help Pay Huge Defense Bill

By Edward Ryan

President Roosevelt and the Budget Bureau are reported far along on their program of tightening the Federal purse strings for non-defense expenditures to save $250,000,000 or more during the current fiscal year.

That the projected savings will be "more" is the belief of some employe groups and Government executives. In some nondefense agencies, officials report that the actual saving which will be sought will be closer to $400,000,000 than the $250,000,000 figure fixed by the President when he outlined his economy program nearly two months ago.

While the complete economy program has not yet been worked out by the Budget Bureau, officials said, its outlines have sent financial officers in the agencies outside the defense program scurrying to find stray dollars that can be clipped from running expenses.

President Roosevelt has taken a hand at least once in recent days to aid the economy program, in a unique reversal of familiar government financial operation.

The President, it was learned, ordered that the Treasury hold on to a $750,000 fund, already appropriated by Congress to start a 13,500,000 reclamation project near Boise, Idaho. The project had been urged by residents of the Boise Valley, and supported by the surveys of three government agencies.

The Interior Department disclosed the President's order indirectly, with announcement last week that the Boise project had been found "feasible" but that the construction schedule would depend "on budgetary requirements which are controlled by Treasury demands arising from the extraordinary national defense program."

This move was in line with the President's earlier statement that he hoped the savings could be made without reducing employe salaries.

The President, in a letter to Jacob Baker, head of the United Federal Workers, said:

"While I am anxious to reduce as much as possible Government expenditures in fields not affecting defense activities during the time when such large expenditures are necessary for that purpose, I am hopeful that this can be done without reducing the salaries of Government employes.

"If, in the course of curtailing nondefense activities, the number of positions should be reduced to an extent greater than can be absorbed by the vacancies normally occurring, it seems likely that the increase in defense activities will be sufficient to provide places for any regular employes who will be dropped."

In four agencies faced with the economy project—Commerce, Interior, Labor and Agriculture—officials indicated that the President's employe policy is being closely followed in preparing their estimates for savings.

Their search for spare dollars, however, had led them into a couple of dilemmas.

Dilemana No. 1 was the probability that if the Budget Bureau didn't get the savings it was calling for, Congress would be around soon with a mandatory 10 per cent or more economy program.

Dilemna No. 2 was the fact that while the four departments had not yet been tapped for the exclusive list of defense agencies, several of their bureaus had. This meant that they had to plan contraction of their operations in some bureaus, expansion in others, and save at the same time.

Both problems were believed certain to be ironed out by the Budget Bureau. They'll tackle the first it was understood, by going back for more economy estimates if their first collection, being received now, does not reach a high enough figure. They'll settle the second by a critical examination of each detailed Government operation and project, with reference to its importance for defense.

New York to Give S. S. America A Great Big Hand This Noon

Liner Arriving on Demonstration Trip From Norfolk Will Be Welcomed At Lunch Hour by LaGuardia, Crowds

By the Associated Press

New York, July 28.—Shed a tear, if you will, for the good old days—New York is readying an old-fashioned municipal welcome for the liner America.

Remember those parades up Broadway?

From moth balls dating back to the boom-era hysterics for homecoming personages like Gertrude Ederle, Lindbergh and Admiral Byrd, New York, with a nostalgic sigh, tonight dug out the almost forgotten details for a gala city greeting for the new queen of the merchant marine, arriving on a demonstration voyage from Newport News, Va.

Mayor LaGuardia ordered flags flown and asked citizens to turn out tomorrow to see the liner come in. Her arrival at the battery was aptly timed for the lunch hour.

Thousands of stores and taxis will display welcome insignia. Coast Guard boats, police boats and fire boats will go out to escort the liner up the bay. Army planes, Navy planes, commercial planes, and a couple of blimps are scheduled to be flying overhead.

The celebrated Macom, the city welcoming tug in which silk-hatted Mayor Walker, Grover Whalen and other veteran greeters used to disport themselves, has long since been laid up for economy, but Mayor LaGuardia arranged for another boat to take 200 notables down the bay in old-time style.

The Mayor and aides will greet the America at her pier and go aboard for an eleborate reception luncheon.

No arrangements were in sight for any parade up Broadway and ticker-tape deluge, but Wall Streeters vouchsafed that if anybody wanted such, they had plenty of tape to spare.

Guest Pastors Occupy Many D. C. Pulpits

Vacations, Parleys Call Ministers Away From Capital

With scores of clergymen vacationing at seashore and mountain, or attending religious conferences, guest preachers filled many Washington pulpits yesterday. Young people's and other church organizations assumed charge of several services.

Between 11 a. m. and 12 noon, more than 900 people attended Calvary Baptist Church. One of its former assistant pastors, the Rev. Philip G. Murray, was guest preacher. He is now pastor of the Park Baptist Church, St. Paul, Minn.

There are four anchors which the religious person should drop overboard during today's troubled times, he told the congregation. They are, he said, "a simple faith in God, a simple faith that life is worth while the belief that we need to live only one day at a time, and unshakable confidence that good will ultimately triumph over evil."

The pastor was greeted by many friends at a reception in the Sunday school room after the service. The Rev. Edwin H. Tuller, present assistant pastor, assisted in receiving.

Mr. Murray served here from 1932 to 1936.

The Abbott, Sigma Phi and Omega Bible classes took charge of last night's service at Waugh Methodist Church, with Mrs. Martin Abbott, teacher of the Abbott group, speaking. The Ladies' Bible class led services at Park View Christian Church.

Other Services

Among prominent guest preachers were the Rev. William Evans, D. D., Ph. D., Bible scholar and lecturer, of Los Angeles, Calif., who spoke at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church; Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District, Methodist Church, heard at Congress Street Methodist Church; Dr. Edgar C. Beery, East Washington District superintendent, Methodist Church, at Brightwood Methodist Church; Dr. Donald B. McQueen, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Rochester, N. Y., at National Memorial Baptist Church, and Dr. Walter Archbold, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Aquasco, Md., at the Washington Cathedral.

There were services in Lincoln Park, sponsored by the Central "Y," the Catholic Evidence Guild meeting in Franklin and Public Library parks, and several other afternoon outdoor programs.

Jungle Guns Guard Canal Against Raids

By the Associated Press

With a United States air defense battery in the Panama Canal Zone, July 28.—The clanging of a large iron disc set up an unearthly din over the steaming, rain-drenched jungle today.

Soldiers sprang to their gun posts, hidden in the leafy foliage from prying eyes overhead. Telephones buzzed.

A nimble-footed first sergeant scurried "on the double" up a steep, muddy trail to the range finder station, some distance from the sleek, long-snouted guns.

Within five minutes batteries the length and breadth of the Panama Canal knew a plane was approaching.

24-Hour Watch Kept

It turned out to be an innocent Army plane out on a solitary reconnaissance spin, but the bustling activity below emphasized the 24-hour watch being maintained over the Panama Canal, key to United States Naval defenses.

This little drama, unfolded before visiting newspapermen at one of the many jungle batteries lining both sides of the canal, was a sample of the full dress rehearsal staged Friday night when "enemy" planes raided the canal.

"A gratifying test of the alertness and efficiency of the anti-aircraft defenses of the Canal Zone," was the way Brig. Gen. Sanderford Jarman, commander of the separate coast artillery brigade, summed up this test.

But to laymen who witnessed the speed with which the defense forces went into action against that surprise raid, this would appear an understatement.

While the headquarters staff correlated its reports from listening posts and directed counteraction, defense forces up and down the canal played their part with an orderliness and thoroughness born of long practice.

Searchlights stabbed the skies the entire length of the 50-mile wide isthmus. Within minutes after the first alarm the invaders were spotted, big guns had their range and, theoretically, were firing away.

Complete Surprise

And, mind you, the simulated raid was a surprise to every element of the defense forces except for a very few high officials.

The impression of the potency and growing effectiveness of the canal defenses gained from this experience was emphasized by today's visit to the battery deep in the jungle.

Almost daily these batteries go through the whole process of fending off practice attacks and they are proud of their ability to swing into action in 5 minutes, 8 at the most, without advance warning.

The battery went through every step of defense against an actual raid—following reports of the planes' progress that came in from other gun, searchlight and observation posts; spotting it with complicated range-computing apparatus; training its guns by the data thus obtained, and feeding and firing practice ammunition.

For this particular battery the maneuver was over in less than half an hour. But across the gun-bristling jungle it was repeated over and over at scores of other posts.

Guard Against Malaria

It's a lonely existence for these guardians of the Canal and a none-too-easy one. But there were no complaints about the daily dose of quinine, jungle post routine against malaria, or the heavily-chlorinated drinking water.

Snakes and insects? Of course. However, the soldiers had more to say about the ever-present termites which must be guarded against lest a chair or even a house collapse. They mentioned only in passing that a boa constrictor was killed last night near the battery headquarters.

This post, like many others, is miles off a hard-surfaced highway, to reach it you have to labor over a route slashed, blasted and dug from jungle hillsides, impenetrable without a machete. All are closed to the public and are heavily guarded.
